AN OBSERVING JANITOR DIS COVERED WAY TO WEALTH

Made More Money Out of a

Merry-Go-Round, Than Out of Care of Buildings-Now Imploys 100 Men. Nine years ago the janitor of the court-house in a little western town started to the store on Saturday might to buy groceries for the morrow. With him was his little daughter, and he had only a dollar for the purchases They came to a merry-go-round set up on the main street and stopped to watch the whirling hobby-horses and the swinging scats. "Come on; give the little girl ride !" called the man in charge, and the janitor took the advice. Before he left the spot with its then novel amusement he had spent eighty-five cents out of the dollar with which he started. His wages were only $35 a month and his credit at the stores was in consequence moderate. Going home with fifteen cents' worth of food, he thought about the evening's experience. His meditations die not run to recrimination for his travagance, but were something like this: " If that whirling horse machine could get eighty-five cents out of my only dollar, badly as I need money, it must be able to get money from almost anybody. I believe I can make more running one of them than I can working by the month. He talked it over with his wife, and early in the spring he mortgaged his household goods to make a payment on a merry-go-round, which he took to a neighboring village. It met his expectations. Soon he sold it at an advantage and bought a better one. Then he bought another and another. One day at a county fair he took in $500; one circus day his receipts were $450. The idea of catering to the amusement loving public took hold of him. Merry-go-rounds were for children and young people; they could not be run in winter. He worked out a plan for a shooting gallery in which the marks were moving figures-birds, wolves, rabbits, foxes+all kept swiftly moving by a small gasoline engine. He set up a little shop and began their manufacture. They were crude affairs, but the western men liked them, and he could not keep pace with the orders. Then he manufactured merry-go-round and finally, as the street fair crazcame on, added other attractions ur ment concerns together on a train of flat oars and start a carnival pany, which could stay a week in each town and get a bonus from the citizens for coming. He employs a hundred men, has four carnival companies on the road, makes his own railway cars, travels in a private car and is worth something like $100,000, Not so bad for nine years of effort!

At her rooms were found seventeen pawn tickets, two empty chlorodyne bottles, some empty spirit bottles, and a document in which she agreed

Medical evidence was given that Mrs. Bentley was nearly always under the influence of drugs. On the morning of the theft she complained of seeing spots and animals on the walls of her bedroom, and on other people's dresses. That was due to narcotic poisoning. Her income was never less than £27 a month. Mr. Kennedy declined to deal with the case, and committed Mrs. Bentley
