The Bread By-Law.
Some time ago the bakers of the city asked the city council to amend the bread by-law and so that the weight of small and large loaves would be three pounds and one pound and a half respectively.

The change was desired because the old by-law called for different weights for loaves of four and two pounds, and the issue of bread in smaller quantities involved the attachment of figures to it. The inference of some people was that these figures were attached by moistening some sticking substance, and that the process would not be approved by persons of aesthetic tastes. The fact appears that the label is not gummed. It is laid in the pan and adheres to the bread during the cooking of it.

The Montreal council is suffering from the bread agitation. It is entirely opposed to the label upon the bread. It has declared that this label must go. The question to be settled is the one of weight.

The bread maker's reputation is in his own keeping. If he make a poor article, fancy bread or plain bread, he cannot sell it. The public taste is something which cannot be regulated by any law or municipal ordinance.

As The Case Stands
The street railway revival goes on apace. It is probable that the operation of the road will be settled at the next meeting of the council. The men who are interested in the matter, practically the old company, with some changes in its personnel, have duly considered the conditions which the council offered and have accepted them with certain modifications, and these modifications are now before the finance committee.

It is not a secret that there is difference of opinion with regard to them. They involve great responsibilities which are not exactly welcomed by the aldermen. They are felt to be the more serious because it is suggested that the council assume them without reference to the people, and for the reason, principally, that to delay the car service pending the registration of a popular vote would mean the abandonment of the enterprise, for this season, and perhaps altogether.

The aldermen may be equal to the requirements of the company, and may grant all that is asked of them, in the way of power, exemption, free streets, etc., but the proposal is sufficient to make them think hard. The citizens certainly want the cars, for their convenience, the life they lend the streets, and incidentally for the value they give to property, but they expect the company to be reasonable in its requests.

A Canadian "Alien."
What a row was kicked up when Lord Dundonald was in Canada because, inadvertently, he was referred to as a foreigner! The very thought of it moved some people to indignation that was so deep that it could not be uttered and expressed.

It was explained that no reflection was intended. It was simply purposed to say that the government of Canada, composed of men who were familiar with the mind and demands of the people, knew what was desired for the country better than any one who is living in it for the time being, however distinguished he might be. The explanation was not accepted. Nothing could remove the awful insult to a Britisher, especially one of the Dundonald stamp.

But here comes something that is astonishing and for which no apology can be offered. J. Allen Baker is a Canadian. He was born near Trenton, Ontario, in 1876, became a resident of England and a successful manufacturer. Having served the people well in the school board and London county council he thought he was warranted in offering himself for parliamentary honors, and as a liberal and free trade candidate he has been appealing to the electors in East Finsbury.

Fancy the desperation of the opposition when it has described Baker as an "alien." Can a native Canadian be called this? Mr. Baker has, very naturally, resented the insult. The Morning Leader (London) admits that Canada is "quite a reputable place to be born in," and seeks to make light of the attack on Mr. Baker's nationality. But it realizes what a mess some political faction has made of the whole business. The charge that he is an "alien" will not hurt Mr. Baker, on the contrary it will make him strong and abiding friends.

School Clause Carried.
The famous clause 16, of the autonomy bill, has been carried in the commons, after a full and fair discussion, in the course of which the opposition made a weak and ineffectual protest. Evidently the disunion within the party had become intense.

Mr. Bergeron projected an amendment of which there had been rumours. It was a revival of clause 16, as it originally existed, with some modifications. The effect, he explained, would be to give the new provinces whatever schools they desired, and paid for. To-day the Catholic minority had to pay for two school systems, and he did not think that was right.

The amendment was voted down by 129 to 6, the smaller number being composed of Bergeron, Monk, Leonard, Paquet, Bourassa and Levergne.

Mr. Lamont, of Saskatchewan, wanted the clause under discussion made clear to the extent that it guaranteed the half hour of religious instruction in the public schools. He moved an amendment to that effect, and the premier supported it on the ground that clause 16 only aimed at a perpetuation of the present school system.

This latter amendment was adopted by the house on a vote of ninety-nine to twenty-seven. Messrs. Monk, Bergeron and Moran being among the affirmatives. Clause 16, as amended, was formally carried on a division of ninety-six to twenty-eight. Messrs. Bourassa, Lavergne, Monk and Bergeron did not vote.

A feature of the debate was the scrimmage between Messrs. Porter and McKenzie. The first named, during the North Oxford campaign, had attacked the school clause of the autonomy bill and had intimated that it was the handiwork of the papal delegate. Mr. McKenzie denied this and said that he would resign his seat if evidence could be produced to the contrary. Mr. Porter quoted from Hansard that Mr. Foster, Mr. Ouler, Dr. Sproule, and Mr. Bennett had intimated that Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the papal delegate had conferred on the subject, but he did not find that there was anything beyond this intimation, and so Mr. McKenzie was not bound to vacate his seat.

Editorial Notes.
The camp here is a permanency. The water system has been very much improved and by a new and very satisfactory "works."

The military camp is all the attraction. It is visited daily and by many who are interested in the annual drill of the soldier boys.

The fact that J. Allen Baker is an "alien," having been born in Canada, did not injure him in Finsbury. He has redeemed the constituency by a handsome majority.

The school clause in the autonomy bill was amended by the commons, says the Mail, "in spite of a vigorous opposition." Vigorous? Could there be anything weaker and more heartless?

The senate has again, and for the fourth time, killed the union label bill. The gentlemen of the upper chamber do not care about the unions' influence. They have not to go up for election.

Sir Richard Cartwright is authority for the statement that the government during recess may be disposed to discuss state life insurance, or insurance under state direction. Would this give the ideal condition—absolute security and protection?

This is the anniversary of confederation. How little is thought and said about it now. The holiday is about the most lifeless that occurs. And yet it was a great event, and the men who brought it about made sacrifices which do not point to political leaders nowadays.

Mr. McDougall, the auditor-general, is dissatisfied with the appeal he now has to parliament. He wants the act changed so that he can exercise his arbitrary will without regard to the government or its treasury board. The conservative government refused that. Why should the liberal government grant it?

The Mail is real sorry that Mr. Baker, the Canadian, has been successful in Finsbury, England. "It is no honour to Canada to have a person who claims to be a Canadian born figuring in the reactionary side," it remarks. He is liberal and free trader, and he is with public opinion or he would not be elected.

THE 16TH REGIMENT
IS HAS BEEN VERY LONG IN EXISTENCE.

A Lady Who Went Into Raptures
Over the Force—It Was Composed of Giants Who Rode Superb Equines.

A lady from Picton recently went into raptures when she recounted the deeds of valor wrought by the famous 16th Regiment of Prince Edward. If she had but stopped there. No, her enthusiasm must needs carry her still further. The men composing this corps were giants. We forget exactly how many feet high. And the flag-staff carried by the regimental color-bearer, it was so puny a staff. Two ordinary men could not lift it from the ground, hence we were looking for great things from the 16th. Their name would be to conjure with. Mother would use it to hush their infants into slumber at the close of day. The Black Douglas would be no more famous in nursery rhymes. The noble men of the 16th, would relegate that gallant song to the back ground. As for the mounted officers of the regiment! The horses they rode were well let us not roll, our word might be questioned, and it would never do to vary one iota from the truth. And were we disappointed when the 16th marched into camp? Let us stand for yourself the next time you visit the camp and if our statements are exaggerated well-blame it on the lady from Picton.

However, the 16th Regiment is no new one. It was organized some forty-three years ago. In the year 1822, two companies were formed in Picton—the first to be enrolled was No. 1 company, with Thomas Bog as captain and Donald Fraser, and Charles A. Chapman, as subalterns. The second company was enrolled in J. W. Langmuir as captain, with Thomas McPaul and William J. Hare as subalterns. These companies formed the nucleus of a regiment which ultimately consisted of five companies, in addition to the two above named, viz., No. 3, Wellington, Capt. W. Patterson; No. 4, Comstock, Capt. W. Brady; No. 5, Milford, Capt. L. Huggin; No. 6, Hopedale, Capt. J. H. Allan; and two additional companies enrolled in the township of Ameliasburg—one at the village of Roblin's Mills, and one at the village of Redwood—the former under Capt. Thomas Lanier, and the latter under Capt. Wm. Anderson. The first seven companies were gazetted on the 6th day of February, 1823, as the 16th Battalion, and Walter Ross, M.P., was appointed commanding officer, with rank of Lieut.-Col.; and on the 10th of July, 1823, the then Capt. T. Bog, was appointed as major of the battalion.

In the year of 1825, during the American war, a company was made up from the battalion—taking a quota from each company—3 officers and 65 non-commissioned officers and privates. This formed No. 9 company of the 3rd Administrative Battalion and was stationed at Hemmingford, in the county of Huntingdon, to prevent side from southern refugees in Canada across the border.

The battalion saw service during the Fenian Raid scare in 1867, at Kingston, being called out on several occasions to meet a prospective foe, but none made their appearance. They remained in Kingston for a period of seventeen days, returning after a bloodless victory.

In 1825 the county council, which took the greatest pride in the battalion, presented them with white helmets at a cost of $200, and in the summer of 1826 the ladies of Picton presented the battalion with a set of colors which were made in England. They were considered the finest set of colors in the third military district. Lieut.-Col. Putnam is at present in command of the regiment.

Robert D. Martin Passes Away in Montreal.
The death is announced at his home in Montreal of Robert Dennis Martin, one of Canada's pioneer grain men. Mr. Martin, born in Nanapanee fifty years ago, has been ill for some years. In the early days of his business career Mr. Martin went to Deseronto, where he entered the hardware trade. He afterward went to Winnipeg, where he became interested in the grain trade, and developed one of the largest and most prosperous businesses of the kind in Canada. Mr. Martin, who for years has been associated with E. S. Jaques and A. P. Stuart, forming the R. D. Martin company, limited, moved to Montreal some five years ago. He leaves a widow and five children. His remains were buried in Nanapanee on Friday. Mr. Martin and family resided in Kingston for some years, occupying "Romilly House," Barrie street.

It is reported that this property has been purchased by Attorney O'Leary for C. G. Emery, New York, who will improve it at a later date.

To Hays A Fine Chapel.
Special to the Whig.
New York, July 1.—Governor's Island is to have a military chapel, to cost approximately $50,000. It will be erected at the expense of Trinity corporation and will occupy a commanding site overlooking Buttermilk channel. The United States government is now increasing the area of the island, and the erection of the chapel will be along the line of other improvements. The building will take the place of St. Cornelius' chapel, a wooden structure erected in 1841.

Trinity corporation has since 1868 provided the chaplain for the army post in the bay. The clergyman here has been nominated by the rector and chosen by the general commanding, with the approval of the war department. This is an unusual arrangement, for at all other army posts in the country the chaplain is a member of the regular army and holds a commission. The corporation pays the salary of the Governor's Island chaplain and the government provides a house for him.
