Interpretation of Laws.
The decision of the Brookville judge, that the machinery used in manufacturing must be exempt from taxation, under the new law, has attracted wide attention. The Hamilton Spectator has it that the intention of the act "was to assess the great bulk of machinery used in manufacturing."

Was that the case? Did the men who had to do with the drafting of the law of the province have in mind the taxation of all machinery used in productive work? It is a pertinent enquiry, because if the contention be true it is at variance with the practice that has generally prevailed. The disposition has been to free all machinery from current rates, and on the ground that the men who operate it are taxpayers and contribute reasonably to the burdens of the state.

The Spectator makes another remark that challenges attention. It is this: "In view of recent decisions by sundry judges it might not be a bad idea for authors of bills to submit them to judges before they are made law—the author of the bill to explain to the judge what he means, and the judge to put the author's desire into such language as will be interpreted, by judges, to mean what is intended to mean." The proposal is not acceptable. The experience of those who sought to have the supreme court pass upon the powers of the legislature to enact a prohibitory measure will not be forgotten. The judges did not like to be interrogated upon legal points which were not covered by the statutes. They represented the plan of ending what they thought about an issue and having framed a bill which would most effectually lower their opinion. One experience of this kind is enough. A repetition of it might suggest serious things to our judiciary.

The Party in Trouble.
The Toronto Mail has been called upon to repudiate the tactics by which the party suffered a severe reverse in the recent bye-elections. Mr. Borden decided, after a personal conference with the local leaders, to make a fight, and to have it hinge upon the merits of the autonomy bill. The idea was to show that the doctrine of provincial rights was in danger, and to appear to the people along this line in a manner that should arouse them into activity.

But Mr. Borden did not have things as he suggested. Others came along with plans and specifications of their own. The Mail says the party is not to be held responsible for what they did. Why? Because the persons and papers that did the mischief are not friendly to the party. "Conservatives," it adds, "may well protest against some of the gritty influences that 'but in,' and pretend to be on their side. Their violent anti-Catholic campaign is calculated to please and help Laurier, and is not intended to promote the interests of conservatives."

For whom is this snub intended? Not for the liberals, for they were not the offenders. The men who entered the constituencies and raised the racial cries—Sproule, Maclean, Hughes, Sheppard, Starr and others—were not fortunate in their programme, but they are not gritty in their influences, and not gritty in their party affiliations. Sheppard, of them all, is the only one who can be said to have thought at all kindly, at any time, of the liberal party, and from the government at Ottawa he is said to have had his reward. The papers which were ferreted in their abuse of the Catholic church and its representatives were not liberal, or of gritty influences. The Toronto News is now edited by a former editor of the Globe, but the News is not liberal, nor independent, but out and out conservative, and the bitterest opponent of anything that is liberal in federal or provincial politics.

It was an evil day for the leader of the opposition when he let some of the kickers run away with the caucus and when, as a result, he announced that every one would speak and vote as he pleased upon the autonomy question. It has led to a serious disruption of the party, and to the rumoured retirement of Mr. Borden from the leadership at the close of the session.

The Montreal Star is reasonable in its criticism of the federal expenditure. It will be over $81,000,000 next year. The Star does not want to see any outlay which is not absolutely necessary, and it does not want to see the progress of the country checked or hampered for "lack of intelligent and constructive expenditure."

The National Idea First.

Should a man resign a public trust for a trust under a private corporation at a higher salary? Is one, looking to his own welfare, expected to think only of himself in the affairs of life? Or are there occasions when he is expected to sink personal ambitions and serve the people at his expense?

The issue becomes acute in considering the case of Mr. Wallace, an engineer of eminence, who was selected as the guiding force in the Panama canal scheme, at a salary of $25,000 a year. He seems to have been the choice of the national executive and to have accepted office practically upon his own terms. When his staff had been organized, and the great work was launched, Mr. Wallace received overtures from a private corporation, and accepted the moving impulse being a salary about twice that which had been promised him by his country. He thereupon resigned.

The secretary of war, Mr. Taft, seems to have the immediate reservation, in a departmental sense, of the canal, and he became very greatly shocked with Mr. Wallace's apparent indifference towards a public duty. "I am astonished," he writes, "that for mere mere you change your position without thought of the embarrassing position in which you place your government. Your duty in the premises should be measured by the high obligation of a public officer with a sacred allegiance to the government. It should be his honor and his pleasure to serve. You were in honor bound to perform your duties upon the isthmus for a year at least. Until we had reasonable opportunity to select a competent successor and prepare him for the great duties of that office."

That is a very high altitude from which to view the conditions of service, and to pass upon the efficiency or deficiency of the individual. It is just possible that Mr. Taft was irritated by the prospective loss of an engineer whose place he could not fill at once, while he had his plans laid for a trip abroad. For he must be aware, fully, that the public servants under the government are no better than the members of the government itself.

Men of large mind and capacity for service will not hold public offices any longer generally than it pays them. Elihu Root and Paul Morton leave the cabinet of Mr. Roosevelt, the one to enter upon a law practice that commands several times the revenue he enjoyed as a secretary of war, and the other head of the Equitable Life Assurance company at six times the salary he received as the secretary of the navy. To neither of these Mr. Taft read a lecture upon the proprieties of life, and particularly upon the virtues of self-sacrifice in the public interest.

The idea enunciated by Mr. Taft is the one which has made Japan what it is. In the Mikado's kingdom every man is, for the state, and the aim of his existence, pursued with unflinching persistency, is to serve his nation at any cost. The world has been astonished by the success of the Japanese. Why should it when they are influenced by one great and mighty impulse—to do, or die for the nation's glory. America has not this overwhelming sense of national greatness, and its people, however patriotic they may appear on certain occasions, in the test fall very far short of their own ideals.

As Well as a Mark of Beauty is Luxurious Hair.

It has been truly said that the crowning glory of our race is a luxuriant head of hair.

It used to be thought that this was bestowed capriciously, and it is only recently that scientists have discovered that its beauty is dependent upon the absence of a minute germ which flourishes in the hair follicles, where it destroys the life of the hair. To restore this life and kill the germs which cause the mischief is the mission of Newbro's Hairpeptide.

"STEAM ROLLERED."

Rev. Dr. Bland, Denounces English Protection.

Winnipeg, July 6.—References to Dominion day were general in the pulpits on Sunday. Rev. Dr. Bland, a Wesley College professor, took occasion to speak on imperialism.

In the course of his remarks, he referred to "that party in Britain that brings repugnance to most Canadians—the party that stands for a state church, even when that church tramples on the conscientious convictions of others, and repudiates the fundamental principle of the British constitution, that with public support should go public control; a party led by two men, one of whom is a politician after an order not characteristic in England, clever and unscrupulous; the other a man who plays fast and loose with his own pledges. That party has made a desperate effort to retrieve its fortunes, discredited by the conduct of the South African war and the education act, by representing its adherents as only imperialists. Its followers assert that every vote cast against them in the coming election will be a vote against the empire."

"The whole movement," Dr. Bland said, "is a kind of humbug."

"Who are the movers in England? Mr. Chamberlain, whose ruling motive is personal ambition; manufacturers, who hope to have a large market in Canada, or at least, a protected market in Britain; landlords and farmers, who want to see the price of wheat raised; some disinterested and simple-minded wealthy people, who can afford to be magnanimous as to increased cost of living, and are carried away by imperialistic phraseology so lavishly used."

"In Canada its chief friends are the manufacturers, some of whom are now hobnobbing with the Chamberlain party in England, bragging about the Canadian preference which, probably, most of them have denounced, and would gladly abolish if they could."

The address, which continued along the same lines, contained reference to the farmers of Canada. He said they had not yet spoken on the question, but when they did speak their voice would not be raised on the side of a proposal to tax the food of the British poor, eight millions of whom are habitually only one week from starvation. Dr. Bland predicted that at the next election in Great Britain Chamberlainism, which included the education act and colonial preference, would not be moved under—it would be "steam rollered."
