TURE WITH FRANCE.

Former French Foreign Minister Talks Very Cockily of Anglo-French Relations - What Britain Could Do. Paris, July 14.-Former Foreign Minister Delcasse in the course of an interview upon the British and French naval amenities at Brest, said "In case of war Great Britain would he surely with us against Germany, of Germany amount to? What would become of her commerce? Of her merchant marine? It would mean annihilation. That is the real significance of the present exchange of visits of the British and French squadrons. An understanding between these two powers and a coalition of their navies would create a naval war machine so powerful that neither Germany nor any other power would risk conclusions upon the sea. It is the sea which it is necessary to command today, and the war in the far east has conclusively demonstrated that,

"The Anglo-French cordial understanding," he said, "was an achievement toward a definite understanding between Russia and Great Britain. and this further understanding would have been the work of the French cess of such a task would have strengthened our influence in British councils and assured for a long time the peace of the world." M. Delcasse, asked for his opinion of France's accepting a conference on Morocco, gave the following textual response : "To go to a conference a mistake-and such a mistake !" THE MAILS ARRIVE The Experiment Said to Be the appointment of M. Nelidoff, the Russian ambassador to Paris, as a peace plenipontentiary, was originally approved by the emperor, but the age of M. Nelidoff, and the impossipility of his undertaking a sea voyage, caused him to ask to be relieved. Count Lamsdorff, the foreign minister, then suggested M. De Witte for the appointment, but the emperor's objection to M. De Witte was at that time insuperable. Only then was made the selection of M. Muravieff, who was at the time taking the cure at the mineral springs at Contrexville, France; and who arrived here in poor health. The peace party is overjoyed at the fact that the ne gotiations have been placed in De Witte's hands. It is the firm belief that thus not only is a successful termination of the negotiation secured, but that M. De Witte will se cure the best possible terms for his
