The Death of Very Popular Young The death on July 12th, of "Mos-

Hers was a life of much promise, and being of a bright disposition, she made many friends, who feel that by her death the world is sadder and poorer Educated at the Kingston Collegiate Institute, she qualified as a teacher and gave three years of useful service to a school near Battersea, Looking for a larger sphere of service, she entered as nurse-in-training at the city | hospital, Worcester, Mass. A bad fall incapacitating her for duty temporari ly, she resigned and returned home Having recovered rapidly, with apparently no ill effects, she resumed her vocation of teaching and was engaged at Sharoton, where she remained until August last. During the holidays she suffered an attack of what seemed like rheumatism or sciatica, and was removed to the Kingston General Hospital, where her case baffled the physicians. All indications, however, point to the accident at Worcester, as the origin of the trouble, which has had such a sad issue. There being no orout, under intense pain. In few lives has there been so much sunshine, but rarely has so brief a life experienced so much suffering. Her former school friend, Miss Hester Lovick, was the nurse in attendance, and she with the family did all, that love could inspire, but to no avail. Rev. the Street Railway. The Portsmouth council will likely reach terms with the street railway company as to the repairing of the streets. There was a conference last night between W. F. Nickle and H. W Richardson and the council, with John L. Whiting, K.C., as village advisor. The councillors were willing to keep the crossings and approaches in order but did not wish to have the indem nity clause in the agreement This clause made the conpany liable for accidents on its line. Finally was proposed to agree to terms as to the grading and repairing of the line and another meeting will be held next
