Leaving Public Life.

Mr. Lawson, of Boston, who is after the millionaires, and who declares that if the people will trust and follow him he can regulate the stock ture, but after being voted a life anbrokers for all time, is regarded as mystery. What has impelled him to the great task he has in hand? Love of notoricty or love of gain? A spirit of repentence or of revenge? None of these. So he asserts. He went into the copper deal with Rockefeller and Rogers, and they squeezed him and others. Practically, he alleges, the people were robbed and ruined.
