HIS HORRID CRIMES

Was Not Hanged in Chicago To-Day.

A VERITABLE BLUEBEARD HE WAS INDEED.

A Woman Proved to Be His Nemesis—He Robbed Her and She Had Revenge—Suspicious Deaths Among His Many Wives.

Chicago, July 28.—Johann Hoch, to have been hanged, to-day, has been reprieved by Gov. Dineen until the middle of September.

Dr. Liston Montgomery, a well-known physician, accompanied by a woman whose name was said to be Mrs. May Wilson, appeared at the court, about two hours before the time set for Hoch's execution, and stated that money was available to take Hoch's case to the supreme court. The judge postponed the execution until this afternoon, and it was announced that Hoch's attorney would talk to the governor by long-distance telephone as soon as possible.

If Johann Hoch is guilty of half the crimes charged against him he truly deserved to be called the modern "Bluebeard." The only case affording anything like a parallel in the police records of late years was that of Knapp, the Canadian murderer, who was executed at Columbus a couple of years ago, convicted of the murder of one of his wives and suspected of killing several other women and young girls.

Hoch married Mrs. Mary Hendrickson under the name of Schmidt in 1903. He left her shortly afterward and lived in Chicago. Mrs. Walker died about a month after her marriage, and it was charged that Hoch poisoned her in order that he might marry her sister, Mrs. Emilie Fischer. Mrs. Fischer, who proved to be a marital duplicitous woman, had accumulated years of infidelity the small fortune of $750. Mrs. Fischer married Hoch in Joliet last January, according to his words of promise and kindness.

Eight days after her sister, Mrs. Walker-Hoch, had died a sudden and mysterious death. The day after her wedding Hoch decamped with all her savings.

The last Mrs. Hoch complained to the police and an investigation was at once set on foot. Germans were taken to apprehend the fugitive should he undertake to return to St. Mary's. The progress of the investigation developed many startling discoveries.

Operations which were going on in connection with Hoch with similar operations with many women. The police declared that he had at least fifteen wives within ten years, and among that number it was said that at least six of them died under circumstances which were regarded as suspicious. Three of the women died in Chicago, while the others disappeared mysteriously from Milwaukee, St. Louis, and one or two other cities where Hoch lived.

Becker-Hoch was said to have been mysteriously in St. Louis in 1902. Mrs. Mary Schultz-Hoch disappeared from Argos, Ind., in 1900, and Mrs. Lena Hoch died in Milwaukee about two years ago. Hoch was positively identified as the husband of all three women, as well as of three or four whom he married in Chicago. His record appears to have been in all years since a British secret committee that see the announcement is connected in the public mind with Emperor William's recent tour and the visit of a German squadron to Scandinavian waters. The genius of the British fleet is regarded as designed to counteract the reappearance of German influence in Scandinavian politics.

Bookmaker Drops Dead. Buffalo, July 28.—Captain Edward McManava, prominent as a bookmaker in the county, was felled with his picture and accessories of his alleged crimes. Within a week a woman called at a police station in New York city and told the officer in charge that a man whom she believed from the picture to be the missing Hoch had engaged a room at her hotel. An officer accompanied her home and at once recognized the fugitive. The woman said that within two days of his arrival Hoch had learned that she had a little money saved up and had immediately proposed marriage to her.

Hoch was returned to Chicago, where he was later identified by a half dozen of the women he had married and deserted. His trial on the charge of murdering Mrs. Walter-Hoch resulted in a speedy conviction. The date of execution was several times postponed by Gov. Dineen to give the man a chance to obtain another trial.

Their Kindly Way.

The unfortunate Russian proprietors have been reduced to a pretty pass! About a month ago a good woman, if ever she had one, a widow, adorned by her tenacious devotion to the beneficence of crowds of miserables, who never asked in vain for her charity, was waited upon by a reputation from the village over which she ruled, who addressed her in these words:

"Little mother, you know how much we love you. You have always been the most generous and amiable of mothers. We should be ready at any other time to give our lives for yours. But now, if the revolutionary committee should order us to assassinate you we should do it, because, for us, the committee's orders are law. Therefore, it is, little mother, that we come to implore you before they speak, in this sense, to go away."

And with all kindness of deferential gentleness, with the tears in their eyes, these good folk conducted their benefactress to the nearest station, where she took train for abroad. The heroine of this true story is Princess Emerytinsky, one of the greatest ladies of Russia, regarded as the personification of charity.
