The great London sewer which passyears, died Sunday morning at the bome of her son James Wiltse near Deptford, and has its outfall at Greenwich, was the scene the other day of a terrible misadventure, says The London Telegraph. One of the two After spending several weeks with men, whose names are Murfitt and Follett, was too weak to ascend, but his companion was able to climb to the surface and shout for help,

First to assist were Mr. W. T. Standen, landlord of a neighboring public house, and a young lighterman, named Bassett, who was passing, to his work. Standen brought a line, with which Bassett descended to the bottom of the shaft. A few feet along the tunnel he found a man in a state of collapse. The rope was quickly tied round his waist, and he was pulled up to the surface. In the fresh air he quickly

Nothing had been seen of the third man, Freke. Taking with them the lifeline, Standen and Bassett pluckily undertook to descend once more to search. They walked along the tunnel as far as the life-line would reach, but were obliged to retire. Meanwhile firemen from the Gommroad station had been called up. Firemen Coleman and Fox immediately went down, in the hope of reaching the man Freke. Flying Machines. Gen. Baden-Powell, one of the pic turesque heroes of the South African war, has been letting in light upon the airship for practical use. The general is president of the Aeronautical Society of Great Britain and recently contributed some interesting history and a little philosophy anent aerial navigation to the Fortnightly Review. In 1884 the French Government constructed an airship with a propeller driven by an electric motor. This machine traveled twenty-five minutes, and another in 1902 made a voy-

He thinks that the aerial machine of the future may combine several of the details of the best contrivances now under experiment and that engineers and investigators generally agree that the attainment of human flight apparently presents no insuperable obstacles. This is most assuring and, coming from an authority, is entitled to credit. Whether a flying machine will be practically useful or otherwise must be demonstrated after it is perfected.

Danger in Cellulold Combs. Lally Bernard, The Globe's London correspondent, says: I wonder if there is as great a percentage of accidents in the hair as there is in England. TO TELEPHONE USERS AND THE GENERAL PUBLIC.

The condition of the telephone business in Canada was described by a witness at the opening of the Parliamentary enquiry as

"A monopoly owning and controlling the local and long distance lines."

The real condition is, that neither in the past nor the present has there been a monopoly of the telephone business in Canada. It has been strictly a case of "the survival of the fittest."

During the past twenty years more than a hundred companies have been authorized by Dominion, Provincial and Municipal authority to do a telephone business in Canada, particularly in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec, where this Company has been chiefly operating, of which ninetytwo are in operation to-day, as disclosed by the evidence before the Special Committee.

The field is, and has been free to all, and those who have embarked in the business have lacked neither scope nor public encouragement

Several companies organized by men of prominence in this country, backed by large capital, have offered the keenest possible competition to this Company, but without success. The failures have been many and disastrous.

It was stated in evidence before the Special Committee that the City of Toronto has during the past ten years advertised in the press of Canada and the United States for a company to furnish a competing telephone service in that city. Other cities in the Province have done likewise. Promoters have time and again sought to exploit the Canadian field. The law permits municipalities to furnish its citizens with telephone service.

In view of these facts, we are justified in claiming that the Company has achieved its present position in fair com-

The secret of this success has been enterprise in exploiting the business, integrity in the administration of the financial affairs of the Company, economy of management, giving service superior to all competitors, and maintaining reasonable rates. It is by a continuance of this policy, and by meeting, where practicable, every demand of the Public for future extensions and development, that we hope and expect to maintain our present position with our patrons, the Canadian People.
