STEAM COAL BUYERS-ATTENTION

I will sell you coal that will cost you no more than you're paying, and that will burn slower, steadier and stronger, making less steam. There's great difference in coal, and your purchase when you don't get full value. There is only one "best" coal. It takes more than an ordinary expert judge to get it. It must be an INSISTENT expert. It's as hard for me to get the choicest selection of coal as it is for the consumer—when he doesn't know where to go. The difficulty coal makes me sure I can benefit you. A small order will show the quality. Your friend will tell you. Will you send me the order?

Canada For Canadians.

The Spectator believes Canadians should be given Canadian offices when they become vacant. But if Canadians cannot be found the government is to be excused for accepting importations.

Could it not find an expert accountant in Canada, to advise it with regard to its public accounts? Could it not find in Canada men who were capable of filling the vacancies that occurred on the staff of the agricultural college?

It is not an excuse to say that the college staff is largely and almost entirely made up of men who graduated from it and that many have gone out to fill important places in the United States.

Canada for the Canadians has been a favourite cry of the conservatives. When they have the opportunity they should give the proof of their loyalty to Canada, its people and its institutions.

Hammering The Senate.

Now it is the senate which is censured in severest language because it did not hold up the indemnity bill. One paper has it that there was an understanding between the commons and the senate on this subject, and in consequence there has been a general lowering of the sense of public honor and of popular respect for government.

It is recalled, too, that the liberals at one time advocated senate reform, and then abandoned it. They certainly did not contemplate something which would lift the upper house of the extreme partyism by which it was afflicted after the defeat of the Tupper government. Every important government measure was menaced, and it looked as if some measure had to be reported to in order to get the public business through reasonably and expeditiously. Time, however, as Sir Richard Cartwright said, brought its cure. The vacancies were filled, as they occurred, by members who were in sympathy with the liberal government and now, while there is the inevitable kick, there is no obstruction. The demand is not as necessary as it used to be.

The upper chamber is still independent, we hope, and not deserving of the censure that has been passed upon it. The senators, perhaps, decided that they were worth as much to the country as the commons. At any rate they did not object to the increased indemnity. Neither did the ex-ministers object to the pensions. Mr. Maclean will have it that they were hypnotized, but they gave no evidence of that.

Mr. Maclean Talks Again.

Mr. Maclean, M.P., has unbundled himself of another delirance on the works of the Commons. It is largely a rehash of the speech he made at Wexford. Again the conservative party is rebuffed because it did not, at his bidding, fight the autonomy bill the harder. According to Mr. Maclean the government was divided, and had the pressure from the outside been continued the policy of coercion would have had to be abandoned. What he wanted was a battle-royal, and instead, "we had," said Mr. Maclean, "what I must call anæmic warfare. And if it were not bloodless it was worse, some of the forces fighting on the liberal side."

There is a repetition of the weary excuse that he did not in the house offer a strong and determined resistance to the salary grab because there was no use. He did not sign the round robin in its favour—others can say the same thing—and he did not keep the money when he did take it. Why did he accept it at all? Why did he compromise himself by touching the $1,000 when it represented coercion as he alleges? Next session he may not be as considerate of the children's hospital, or of some kindred institution. It looks as if Mr. Maclean is taking no chances of eventually losing the thing which he now so severely denounces.

Something new crops out in this Toronto Junction epistle—for he read a statement rather than made a speech. He has had another dream, and it is about the North-West. He saw, in the vision, coercion talking on new forms. It was represented in Alberta and Saskatchewan by lieutenant-governors, by premiers, by ministers and members of the legislature. These had the support of mounted police, officers of the law, representatives of the interior department, the Grand Trunk Pacific company and its contractors, perhaps even the Canadian Pacific and the Canadian Northern railway companies. And between all these Mr. Haultain, a college chum of Mr. Maclean's, was going to get a

Editorial Notes.

Perhaps the school board has learned a lesson, in the very recent examinations, as to the wisdom of changing the staff during the term. It will be surprising if some good result does not follow.

Talk of making money. The harvest of the North-West represents a hundred million dollars. And much of that was being made while the people slept. Nature excels man in great accomplishments.

The World insinuated a day or two ago that the governors of the new provinces would be tools of the federal government. One does not get this impression of the men from the names which have been submitted.

Over 10,000 people killed and $4,000 injured in the railway accidents of the United States in 1904. A terrible toll surely! Life is being offered as a sacrifice in the interest of speed, and safety should be the first consideration.

Some evil spirit has set the report in circulation that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is not in good health. His private secretary says he has not been in better health, and that he is recuperating at his old home before going on his western tour.

Jerome, in New York, is going to demonstrate the possibility of being elected with republicans and democrats against him. The feat is a great one. But Piquette, in Detroit, years ago, showed that the man is sometimes more powerful than the party.

Anxiety has been expressed because Mr. Haultain and W. Scott are to collide in Saskatchewan as prospective candidates for the premiership. Mr. Haultain has changed from Alberta to Saskatchewan. So he is the one who is looking for trouble.

The new lieutenant-governors of Alberta and Saskatchewan are to be Hon. Messrs. Buxton and Forget. The first named has been a member of the territorial assembly. The last named is now the lieutenant-governor of Saskatchewan. Both are good men, the highest of their class.

If the city of Toronto were to venture into the insurance business it would be just the municipality's luck for fire to break out and burn up the securities in the accumulated reserve fund.

Maclean's Ambition.

Ottawa Free Press.

W. F. Maclean has now reached the conclusion that he is the Joshua of the conservative party who will lead them into the promised land. Just how Moses is to be disposed of is a matter that he has not yet settled.

Barbed Wire Fences.

Colin Campbell, one of Huron county's lovers of agriculture, is recovering from severe injuries to his hand, caused by his own barbed wire fence. He was working with his horses and had left them for a few minutes; they got entangled in the rears, and before Mr. Campbell could extricate them, they pushed against him, causing him to take hold of the barbed wire fence. He was carried along some distance before relief came. Although the wire was rusty and blood poisoning was imminent, his hands are healing most satisfactorily. Mrs. Campbell had just returned from a tour through Eastern Canada, giving addresses to Women's Institutes.

While Mr. Campbell meets sympathy there is also a consciousness of self-blame. The barbed wire fence is barbarous, and should be prohibited. Plain wire answers every purpose, except a spiteful one towards people and animals.

The Venus, the British warship conveying Sir Norris Lockyer, director of the Solar Physics Observatory, and a party of astronomers to view the eclipse of the sun from Algeria, has been ordered away from Philippeville on the ground that it is a fortified vessel, and that it is impossible to admit representatives of a foreign nation.

TOILS LIKE $10 CLERK.

Gives Up Auto Racing and Yachts for Business.

New York, Aug. 18.—William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., multi-millionaire, automobile enthusiast, yachting expert and general lover of nerve-racking sports, has given up all the frivolities of life and has settled down.

The young millionaire has elected a business career for himself, and to-day is working as hard as any $10-a-week clerk, although he draws no salary.

But there are two differences between Vanderbilt and such a clerk. He does not get a cent for his labors, and, besides, he does not have to work. He does it because he likes it, and wants to learn the railroad business.

Every weekday Mr. Vanderbilt can be seen at his desk in the directors' room of the New York Central railroad, at the Grand Central station. He is there strictly for the purpose of learning the railroad business.

A chronology of the average weekday of this once gay millionaire now reads: Up at seven o'clock in the morning; hasty breakfast; hurried automobile ride from his estate, Great Neck, L.I., across the island to the dock; boards his yacht and sends it at top speed down East river to Twenty-third street; boards trolley car and arrives at office before ten o'clock; works until half hour for lunch; instead of hour as other employees; resumes work until five; then hustles home.

All this is in strange contrast with the Vanderbilt of other days.

It was only a few years since young Vanderbilt was daring death in his $5,000 racing automobile, "the White Ghost," whizzing at sixty-five miles an hour, and he imported the "Red Demon" from Germany, with which he raced at seventy-five miles per hour. Then he heard of the twenty-four knot torpedo boat, the yacht Taranatula, which he quickly bought to satisfy his craving for thrills.

Mr. Vanderbilt has now sold all these racing monsters, and, to the surprise of all, has taken his flagship of the Savannah-Corinthian Yacht Club, out of commission.

But the Trunk Only Remained—Big Crowd in Pictou.

Pictou, Aug. 18.—Wednesday was circus day, and the largest crowd that has been in town on any one day this year, was the result. Farmers, with their families, flocked in from every country road; excursions came in on the steamers, and the streets were thronged during the early morning until after the parade. In the afternoon, a conservative estimate of the crowd entering the tent was five thousand, and another big audience was in attendance at the night performance.

J. C. Fergie, a lumber merchant of Pittsburg, who was in town a few days, guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Beringer, left, to-day, to join his family at their summer cottage, Stony Lake. Miss Gena Hepburn and K. T. Deard are at the Sand Banks. Miss Lina Barker is spending a week with Mrs. H. S. Wilcock's, "Kamp Doanplee." Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Gearing have returned from Old Orchard. Mr. R. W. Riney, Toronto, is the youthful hostess of a jolly party of young boys and girls, Thursday, going down on the yacht Mudge to Pringle's Cove.

Clarence Cole found the remains of a man, on the south side of Main Ducks Island. The trunk of the body alone remained, the legs and head being gone. It is thought that it may be the body of a man who was on the Hall, wrecked two years ago.

In the afternoon, a conservative estimate of the crowd entering the tent was five thousand, and another big audience was in attendance at the night performance.

J. C. Fergie, a lumber merchant of Pittsburg, who was in town a few days, guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Beringer, left, to-day, to join his family at their summer cottage, Stony Lake. Miss Gena Hepburn and K. T. Deard are at the Sand Banks. Miss Lina Barker is spending a week with Mrs. H. S. Wilcock's, "Kamp Doanplee." Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Gearing have returned from Old Orchard. Mr. R. W. Riney, Toronto, is the youthful hostess of a jolly party of young boys and girls, Thursday, going down on the yacht Mudge to Pringle's Cove.

Clarence Cole found the remains of a man, on the south side of Main Ducks Island. The trunk of the body alone remained, the legs and head being gone. It is thought that it may be the body of a man who was on the Hall, wrecked two years ago.

FOUND A BODY.

But the Trunk Only Remained—Big Crowd in Pictou.

Pictou, Aug. 18.—Wednesday was circus day, and the largest crowd that has been in town on any one day this year, was the result. Farmers, with their families, flocked in from every country road; excursions came in on the steamers, and the streets were thronged during the early morning until after the parade. In the afternoon, a conservative estimate of the crowd entering the tent was five thousand, and another big audience was in attendance at the night performance.
