WHY THE ARGYLE RAN FULL SPEED IN FOG.

Jeneral Manager Hazlett Says it Was the Safest Way-The Boat Ran According to Compass

The judgment of Commander Spain, R.N., wreck commissioner of Canada, and Capt. Thomas Donnelly, assessor, in connection with the steamer Argyle is of great importance to the marine interests. In it is noted the fact that life boat and fire drill were carried out regularly on the Argyle, and it would be well for all captains to follow out that practice, which, though required, seems that she was going at the rate hour. The regulation in respect Thursday "Every vessel shall, in a fog, mist falling snow or heavy rainstorm, go at a moderate speed, having careful

It took two hours and forty minutes by scarcely any other vessel. It was necessary, he points out, for didn't, it would be impossible for her to make an afternoon run on time. As to allowing more leeway on the morning in question, he points that had the Argyle run a couple miles further out on the lake and reached the point where she turns into the bay at Oshawa after two hours she would have been in more danger
