THE DAILY WHIG

"Opiter per Orbem Ditor."

A Truth Plainly Stated.

The Hamilton Herald has been accused of preaching a dangerous doctrine in declaring that it makes little difference who is called in as the present adviser of the lieutenant-governor, of Saskatchewan, as the people, by their choice of representatives, will settle the question of government.

"According to this argument," says the Toronto News, "it does not matter how grossly corrupt a government may be, for eventually its crime will be discovered and punished by the people." Are not all governments in the hands of the people, the good and the bad? To whom is appeal made in any event? Is it not to those who have to do with the making and unmaking of parties, whose elect, in the majority, rule in every case?

What advantage would come to Mr. Haultain, the pet of the Toronto News, if he were called to form a government and had not the support of the assembly? What advantage will Walter Scott have if, when he has formed a cabinet, he is not supported by the house whom the people will presently elect?

Granted that the party in power has some leverage, what does it amount to without the public confidence? To the average mind the Toronto News is not discussing the issue with its vaunted clearness and rationality, and the Hamilton Herald is not an exponent of dangerous doctrine. It is expressing a plain truth in a commonsense way.

Echoes Of The Voices.

A profound interest attaches to the announcement that the British Museum has made arrangements for the preservation of the speeches of great men, on great occasions, in the records of talking machines.

Now the thoughts which pass into history go to the museum in manuscripts, or printed documents, and they are the more valuable when their authenticity is vouched by the author. It will be a new experience to have not only the language of distinguished men, but the echoes of their voices, as the record is inserted in the phonograph years afterwards.

What a treasure such records would be to-day if they could be had and the publicist heard the voices of those who figured in the affairs of state fifty or one hundred years ago! What emotions would fill the breasts if the men of later times could be heard again—Disraeli or Derby or Gladstone, in England, and Brown, Mackenzie, Cartier and Macdonald in Canada?

The writer once listened to the voice of Col. Bob Ingersoll—long after he had passed away. It was the oration which he delivered at the grave of his brother. The future was, to Ingersoll, a great mystery, without the assurance which brings comfort to the average Christian, and yet the address breathed thoughts of hope that the grave did not end the relationships of friends. It was not the words that most impressed the hearer, but their pathos expressed in a voice which betrayed the feelings of a deeply saddened heart.

The difficulty will be in selecting the speeches which are to find a place in the archives of the museum. But it is promised that great care will be taken with the work, that it will not be used now, but held for the benefit of posterity.

The Appeal Of No Avail.

"The C.P.R. gets thrown down," is the announcement of a conservative paper with regard to the decision of the railway commission on the Grand Trunk Pacific route question.

The C.P.R. contended that the Grand Trunk Pacific were violating the well-understood principle that the new railway aided by the government should not locate their line within thirty miles of an existing railway, except at terminal points. They had not disclosed where the line from Winnipeg and Portage la Prairie would be built and pending the filing of full information on this point the board should take no action. As an alternative the C.P.R. urged the board to state a case for the supreme court, in order to have a true construction of the act of incorporation of the Grand Trunk Pacific, and where the latter's line should be built.

The Grand Trunk's position was briefly stated. The route, as outlined in the act of incorporation, was to be westerly, north-westerly from Winnipeg, which it was. There was never more than thirty miles to the C.P.R. in Manitoba, in committee while the legislation was passing through the commons, but the idea was abandoned as impracticable.

BATTILING NELSON. San Francisco, Sept. 5.—The battleground for James Edward Britt and West Nelson is the Colma Athletic Club of San Francisco, and the time next Saturday. The fact that the conditions call for forty-five or more rounds makes the fight one of the most unusual in recent ring history, not to mention the prominence and rivalry between the two lightweights.

LOOK HERE, MR. WHITNEY.

Here is a Scorcher from a Friend, Wharton Canadian (Con.). Why it is we know not. But this Canadian does know! If the Whittney government had appealed to the people of North Bruce to-day, their candidate could not poll within two hundred votes of the figures recorded at last election. They record so far has been one of mistakes and misunderstandings between themselves, their officials, or those appointed to administer the affairs of the province in the riding. No matter who the blame lies, an end must be put to the petty annoyances under which the people are now suffering. The latest grievance comes from the Tobernory fishermen. Last week Mr. Robinson, fishery inspector, of South Hampton, visited that place, and fined D. and J. Moulton, and S. Webber $10 and $3 costs each for illegal fishing without a license. What are the facts? J. W. Jermyn, Wharton, for that section, has the proper application and the necessary cash for the license in each case, and so reported to the department some time ago. Some of the cases licenses are already granted. In the face of this, the inspector for another district goes in and causes the poor fishermen to end of trouble and expense. It's a dirty take to begin with. If it's a mistake, it's a dirty disgrace to the minister and his officials, which can only be wiped out by the dismissal of the persons responsible. The people of North Bruce, be they fishermen or farmers, are not set to be treated without consideration by any individual installed into a little petty office for the time being. If the affairs of every riding are being administered as they are of North Bruce, for goodness sake ring out the new, ring in the old. Under the new, looked for nothing better than we got. Under the new we are getting far worse than we are old, much to the disgust and disappointment of this petty-fogging, and Mr. Whitney must understand that it can't come too soon—let that end be his, the gang of officials he is retaining around him in Toronto, or the offices in his gift in the various ridings. The people care not which, so long as the end comes quickly.
