LEARNS HER IDENTITY BUT ONLY WHEN THIRTY-THREE YEARS OLD.

Strange Story of Newark Woman Who Was Cast Off by Wealthy London Parents When a Child. New York, Sept. 8.—A woman who has been known as Frances Blind, since her infancy, thirty-three years ago, has been found after months of search by the British consul in New York, as the keeper of a boarding house in Newark, and informed that her real identity has been hidden from her all her life.

Instead of being the child of persons of modest means, who reared her from infancy, she is the only daughter of a wealthy lumber merchant, of London. Her own mother is dead, as is her foster mother. Her foster father has disappeared.

Her real father is named Boutwell, and the woman herself, in her middle age, discovers she is really May Boutwell, of London. She was brought to this country as an infant by the governess in the family of Boutwell, Mrs. Catherine Blind, Mrs. Blind, with her husband, settled in Newark, and was regularly supplied with money, with which to rear the child.

Mrs. Blind was bound by an injunction not to reveal to the child the fact that she was not her real mother and Blind her father, until the time should come when the wealthy Londoners themselves should decide to acknowledge her. The motive of the strange action of her parents is still a secret to Miss Blind, as she calls herself.

About nine months ago, Miss Blind, learned, through a New York lawyer, of the publication of an advertisement seeking information as to the whereabouts of Mrs. Catherine Blind or her children. Mrs. Blind died in Newark twenty years ago.

A few years ago came the information, through the British consul, that a sum of money and some real estate had been left in London, probably by the girl's mother, to Catherine Blind and her children. From the facts she was able to present, the British consul assured her that her claim to the estate seemed genuine, and that she really is the May Boutwell, who had been given to the care of foster parents at her birth, thirty-three years ago.

EMBLEM'S HISTORY.

Facts Regarding Masonic Stone Built Into Canadian Institute Structure. Interesting light is thrown by Mr. George Johnson, late Dominion Statistician, on the history of the old Masonic Stone, which lies hidden somewhere in the foundations of the new Canadian Institute building, on Richmond street east, Toronto, and which the Sons of England Benevolent Society, who have recently purchased the building, have contracted to find, and hand over to the Institute should they ever tear down the structure. Mr. Johnson says:

"There is a bit of history in that old stone." The late Dr. Charles Jackson, of Boston, 78 years ago, rambling around in the vicinity of the old historic Annapolis Royal—originally founded by the French Fort Royal—crossed over to Goat Island, which is at the head of that beautiful sheet of water, Annapolis Basin, and while poking around, in a mass of antiquarian rubbish, he would come upon a stone bearing the marks of the engraver's tool. Further examination revealed that it was a gravestone. It bore the Masonic emblem, a square and compass, and had the figures 1606 cut in it. He had come across the oldest evidence of the existence of Masonry in this continent.

"He got the stone transported to the town of Annapolis and ordered it to be packed up in a box to be sent to the old Colony Pilgrim Society of Plymouth, Massachusetts. The Pilgrim Fathers landed in 1620, to found Massachusetts, the mother of the New England States. Telling his friend, Judge Halliburton (the redoubtable "Sam Slick" who made his first name to occur to "Sam's" persuasive talk and "soft sawder," "Sam" got the souvenir, and one day, 27 years after, the doctor on a visit to Annapolis, learned from the judge all about the stone, only "Sam" had forgotten how it came originally into his possession. Dr. Jackson recalled the circumstances. The judge and the doctor adjourned to offer a toast to decaying memories, after which a note of surgery sat down to write to a Boston friend about that wonderful stone.

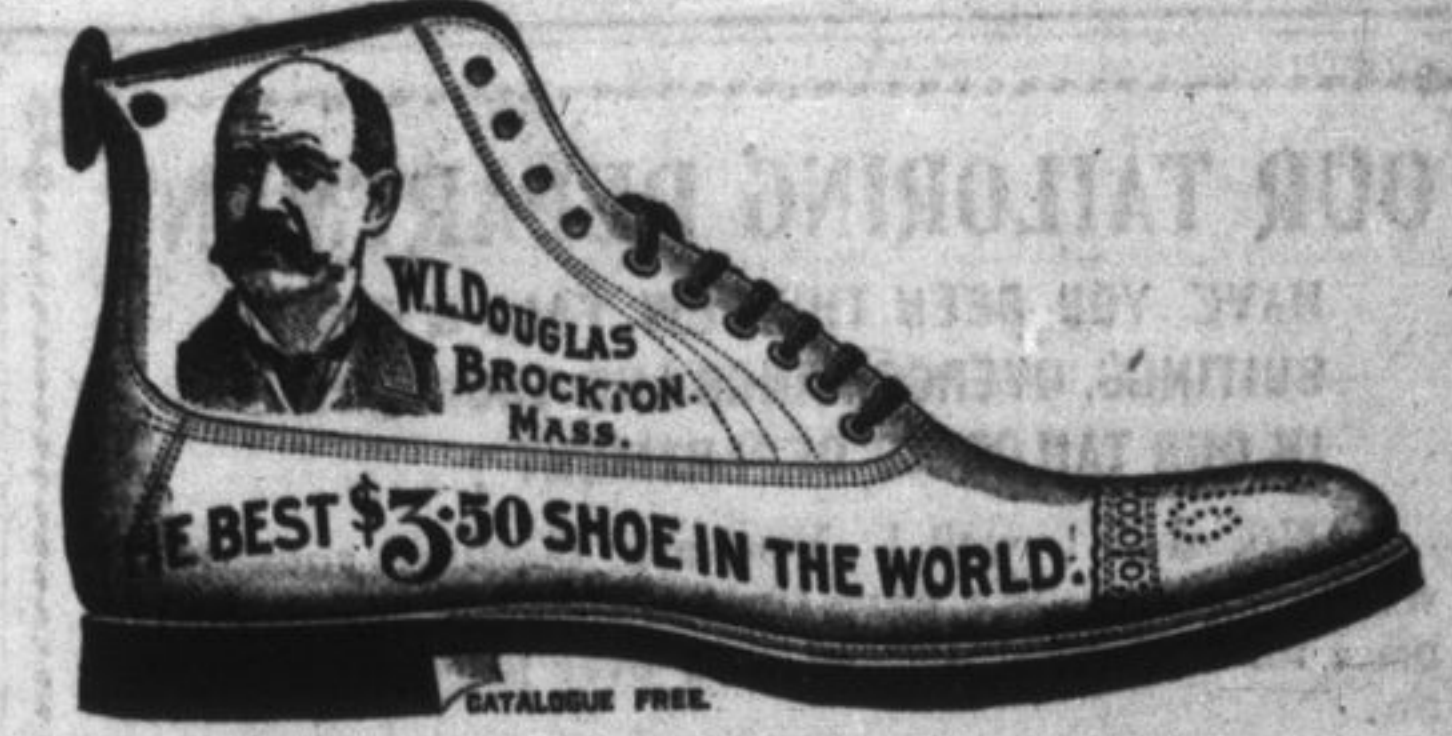

Yellow Fever in Canada. J. Gordon Mowat writes, in The Toronto World: If occasion comes in your way in connection with yellow fever, despatches from New Orleans, it might add interest with Canadian readers to notice that in 1846 Quebec, in common with New York, Philadelphia and other Atlantic seaboard, had its epidemic of yellow fever. That was the last case Canada had of yellow fever spreading from a Canadian focus. In the great yellow fever epidemic which Memphis, Tennessee, suffered terribly, and the pestilence extended into Kentucky and South Illinois, there were five deaths reported in Ontario from the fever; the contagion in all these cases was presumably contracted across the borders, but it was too late in the season for the disease to spread to any other part of the country. The Gt. Lakes Board of Health report for the year mentioned.

Charles Durand's Memories. In his autobiography the late Charles Durand speaks of a visit to Toronto during his student days in January, 1831. In this way: "I called in the morning after the arrival to see some students at the office of the celebrated Simon Washburn, then the leading lawyer of York and Clerk of the Peace for the County. Whom do you suppose I saw there? There I remember William Burns Blake (the father of our two well-known lawyers, Samuel and Edward Blake), studying law in Mr. Washburn's office; with him Joseph Curran Morrison, afterwards one of our judges, and George Duggan, afterwards Judge of the County Courts of York and Recorder of this city, both the latter also studying law. I was introduced to them formally."

Gales From the Lakes. A valuable paper by Mr. B. C. Webster, assistant director of the meteorological service, has just been issued from the Government Printing Bureau at Ottawa in pamphlet form. It is entitled "The Gales From the Great Lakes to the Maritime Provinces, 1874-1904," and with it is given several tables of the storms referred to. It is evident that Mr. Webster has spent a great deal of time and pains to complete his task and it is the first treatise of the kind ever issued. He has received a very flattering letter from a leading official of the United States Weather Bureau, with regard to the treatise. The pamphlet is issued gratuitously.
