Headaches

When the Head aches and the Tongue is Coated

It is Bilioussness or Constipation. Torpid Liver is at the bottom of the trouble. And it takes Fruit-a-tives to make that lazy liver work.

Fresh fruit is fine for these troubles, but one can't eat enough fruit to do much good. The medicinal elements are in too small proportion in the ripe fruits.

A clever Ottawa physician discovered a method by which fruit juices could be combined so that their medicinal action would be increased many times.

Fruit-a-tives are these fruit juices in tablet form. They sweeten and tone the stomach and liver, cure Constipation and remove all blood impurities. One Fruit-a-tives tablet has the same curative effect on liver and bowels as dozens of oranges, apples, figs and prunes. And this action is as gentle as the fruit juices themselves.

"I have been suffering with Torpid Liver and Constipation, and find that Fruit-a-tives are just what my system requires to relieve these complaints. I hope many more sufferers will try them."

Superfluous Hair

Removed by the New Principle, De Miracle

It is better than electricity, because it does not scar or produce a new growth. Better than X-ray, because it does not burn, scar or hurt the tissues under the skin. Better than depilatories, because it does not poison; therefore it will not cause blood poisoning, or produce eczema, which is so common with depilatories, nor does it break or thin the hair, thereby increasing its growth.

Electrolysis, X-ray or depilatories are offered you on the bare word of the operators and manufacturers. De MIRACLE is not. It is the only method which is endorsed by physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals and eminent specialists.

De MIRACLE mailed sealed in plain wrapper as receipt of $1.00. Your money back without question (no red tape) if it fails to do all that is claimed for it. Booklet sent free in plain, sealed envelope, upon request. Write for it to-day to De MIRACLE CHEMICAL CO., 25 Queen St. West, Toronto. For sale by THE ROBERT SIMPSON COMPANY, TORONTO, ONT.

SEVEN TIMES IDENTIFIED.

Amazing Error Leads to a False Charge.

A remarkable case of mistaken identity, emphasizing as clearly as the famous Beck case the dangers to innocent people entailed by the common method of identification of prisoners, came before the Willesden, London, magistrates recently.

Mrs. Georgina Schutter, a middle-aged, respectable dressed woman, was charged with forging and uttering receipts for the payment of money standing in the post office savings bank to the credit of Hortense Lauenroth.

When arrested Mrs. Schutter declared her innocence of the charge, but on being placed among a number of other women, was identified by no fewer than seven persons.

It looked a clear case of guilt, but the post office officials became doubtful about the identity, and the police sergeant in charge of the case set about making enquiries.

These soon placed it beyond doubt that Mrs. Schutter was a woman of irreproachable character, and that further, she had been ill in bed on one of the important dates.

The post office solicitor at Willesden said he could only endorse the results of the police enquiries, and asked that Mrs. Schutter be discharged without a stain on her character.

When Mrs. Schutter was informed that she was free she fainted, and was led out of the court in a state of collapse.

THE OLD TROUBLE WHO WROTE GOD SAVE THE QUEEN?

No Melody the Theme of More Controversy—France and Germany Contend for Authorship—England Probably Has the Honor.

Rochester Post-Express.

Once more the question of the authorship of "God Save the King" has been raised. Probably no melody has been the theme of more controversy. France and Germany have contended for its ownership; Russia, Denmark, and this country have sung it to patriotic words; famous composers have used it in their works. For over a century, its rightful ownership has been a bone of contention. France now comes forward once more with the claim that it is rightfully and exclusively hers. Originally she based her case on the memoirs of the Marquise de Crequi, pointing to the fact that the composer, it seems to be a fact that during the life of Louis Quatorze, the young ladies at the aristocratic convent of St. Cyr, for whose edification Racine wrote "Athalie" and "Esther," used to sing a prayer with the following words:

Grand Dieu, sauvez le Roi!
Grand Dieu, sauvez le Roi!
Vive le Roi!
Que, toujours glorieux,
Louis victorieux,
Voie ses ennemis,
Toujours vaincus.

The latest story coincides with the older tradition in respect of the words; but now the name of Couperin is substituted for that of Lully; and it is asserted that Handel copied the chant during his visit to Paris and, on his return to England, dedicated it to George I. This story needs proof, but the proofs are not forthcoming, and the chances are a thousand to one that they do not exist.

The association of the name of Handel with the composition is curious; for this is the second occasion on which he has figured in the matter. Henry Carey, a popular singer of the first half of the eighteenth century, sang "God Save the King" as his own words and composition at a banquet held to celebrate the taking of Porto Bello, on the Isthmus of Panama, by Admiral Vernon in 1739. This story found many believers, and the fact that Carey, though a fine melodist, wrote "Sally in Our Alley"—was a very indifferent matter of counterpoint, is got over by suggesting that Christopher Smith, Handel's clerk, revised the setting. This slender link was deemed sufficient by many people to justify the belief that the magnificent melody was the work of the great Saxon. On the other hand the hypothesis that Handel stole it would be by no means untenable; for, in the matter of unacknowledged borrowing, he was as unscrupulous as a modern yellow journal, with this difference, that he often put what he took into an immortal setting. But the idea of Handel's authorship has never been seriously entertained, and on the subject, it would be more reasonable to go to Scotland, and find the original of the air, as many canny Scots still persist in doing, in the old Scotch carol, "Remember O Thou Man, Thy Time is Spent." This melody, which was published in Ravenscroft's "Melismata" in 1611, has the same rhythmic swing as "God Save the King" and, what is still more noteworthy, snatches of the melody are identical with measures of the hymn. But, if these scraps of positive evidence favor the Scotch pretensions, those parts of the carol which have no likeness to the national air are emphatically belied.

Henry Purcell, commonly known as the "father of English music," though William Byrd, better deserves the title, has also been brought forward as a candidate for the honors of the authorship of this national air. But the evidence on his behalf is stronger than the same severe criticism that kills the hopes of Scotland. It is true that the large of the Sixth sonata bears a striking resemblance to the air of "God Save the King," at least for a few measures, but what follows is pallid by comparison with the hymn, just as is all save the heart of that Croatian folk-song on which Haydn based another noble national hymn, "God Preserve the Emperor." So Purcell retains the contest. The utmost that his large and the Scots carol do is to suggest the existence of an even greater original. Where is that original to be found? Musical antiquaries who have dabbed in this fascinating and probing subject think that the authentic original of the air is to be found in a composition by John Bull, who was organist to James I., in 1611, and played for the unfortunate James II., in his Catholic chapel before the abolition of the office, and became organist at Antwerp cathedral a position he held until his death. The volume in which this air was contained has been lost sight of; but fortunately a copy was made by the late Sir George Smart. The resemblance to the famous air is remarkable; but even here, there is a marked element of difference. For Bull's air is in the minor and "God Save the King" is in the major.

New York, Sept. 16.—When Jean Baptiste Martin, the proprietor of the Cafe Martin, made the announcement on the last day of last month, that he would pay $100 to every one of his employees who should get married, provided said employees had been in his service one year, he probably did not imagine that he would be called upon to live up to his promise before the first week was over. On the very first day after the publication of his announcement, he paid $20 to one of his employees, to whom a child had been born the day before. Before the week was over two of his employees, Louis Andrews and Susanne Jacquier, who had both been in Martin's employ one year, were married. It cost the generous employer $200 in cash and a box of champagne, not to count what it may cost him in the future.

THE GIRL REFUSED TO ACT HONORABLY.

According to a decision of Judge John R. Daniels, of San Francisco, says the Law Student, engagement rings must be returned when young women decide to recall their promises to marry. Miss Flora Lewis, of that city, has been compelled to hand over to her ex-fiance, B. M. Elsner, the glittering solitaire with which their love was pledged, when they decided, some months ago, that life would hold no joy for either of them unless they could travel side by side. Not very long after their engagement, Miss Lewis, for some reason undisclosed, reached the conclusion that she did not love Elsner sufficiently to marry him, and she was informed him. He gallantly released the young lady from her promise, but demanded the return of the ring which he had given her at the time of their engagement. This would seem to have been a perfectly proper request on his part, for no self-respecting young woman ought to wish to retain any memento of a broken engagement, but Miss Lewis did not look at the matter in that light and refused the request, whereupon Mr. Elsner brought suit to compel her to hand over the ring. The young woman, it appears, proposed to sell the ring and give the proceeds to charity. In deciding the case, Judge Daniels was aided by the fact that she had three cases in point. One was in Vermont, where a young man had given his promised bride money with which to buy a ring. When the engagement was broken the lady refused to give up the money, but was compelled to do so by law. The other two cases were decided in the English courts, one of them a century and a half ago. In his decision Judge Daniels said: "Elsner did not give the ring to the defendant to wear for her adornment, in consideration of her engagement to conform to a custom long in vogue in sealing the ties of an engagement with a ring. When the defendant broke the engagement, the consideration failed, and the gift conditional upon marriage should have been returned." Miss Lewis expresses a determination to carry the case to the highest courts in the hope of obtaining a reversal. We do not think it probable she will succeed. Judge Daniels' decision seems to us perfectly sound on legal as well as moral grounds.

THE FAMOUS RAM GRADUALLY FALLS TO PIECES.

Special to the Whig.

September 16.—The Katahdin, the famous ram constructed after designs made by Admiral Ammen, and which for a long time has been lying in the harbor of Island City, is gradually falling to pieces. The navy department is in a quandary concerning the ship's future and it is doubtful whether the $2,000 required to make the most necessary repairs on the ship will be allowed. The naval constructors and others have been examining the ship with a view to ascertaining whether it is possible to convert it to some practical use, but it is so constructed for the purpose of ramming in a naval engagement, that the removal of this principal characteristic would cost more than the ship would be worth without the novel structural function of defense. It was realized early that the Katahdin was a failure and it was decided that as little as possible would be done with the ship. As nobody wants the ship and nothing can be made of it, it is considered that it is best to expend any money for keeping it afloat. For that reason it is quite probable that the Katahdin, at one time a famous ship, will be allowed to crumble to pieces in the graveyard of the navy at League Island.

No bolts—no cement in "Hecla" Furnaces.

HECLA FURNACES are not put together with bolts and cement. If you know anything about furnaces, you know what that means. Heat expands bolts more or less than the metal surrounding them—and they work loose. Cement drops out. Then gas, smoke and dust creep through the cracks and poison the air. HECLA JOINTS ARE FUSED at white heat and welded together. That makes a solid sheet of metal so there can be no escape of gas, smoke or dust.

If you are putting in a new furnace this year, send us rough sketch of house, and we will make, free of charge, an estimate of the cost of installing the right HECLA furnace.
