Tablet to African Heroes.

Unveiled a Tablet to African Heroes.

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 28.—At a drum-head service, in which Sir Frederick Borden, minister of militia, took part, this city has just seen the unveiling of a tablet to the Vancouver heroes who laid down their lives in the Boer war. Three South African campaigners whose memory is thus honored were Private W. Jackson, Private W. P. Whitely and Trooper F. C. Mackintosh. Jackson and Whitely served in the Second Royal Canadian Regiment, and Mackintosh in the Strathcona Horse. All belonged to the 6th Regiment of this city. Sir Frederick was especially moved by the service for he lost his only son in South Africa.

Gold in the Twilight

Regretfully did the young people last night, say "Good-bye" to the yacht club dance season of 1905. It has been an exceptionally pleasant and gay one, and always made a happy break in the weeks which were dull socially. All the visitors in town were delighted with the weekly hop, and people who were entertaining strangers found the yacht club the very place to take them, and introduce them to their friends. Last night's dance was kept up later than usual, the chaperons, Mrs. Almon, and Mrs. W. F. Nickle being very good, and waiting as long as the young people wished them to. There were several out-of-town people there, among them Miss Monk, of Denver, Colorado, Miss Vera Grey, who intends spending the winter with Mrs. Cleaver Sullivan, and from now on will be regarded as a Kingston girl, the Misses Collier, and the Misses Williams, our bright American visitors, Mr. White, of Toronto, Mr. Elmer Jones, of Brockville, and several others.

MCMILLAN-PRITTE.

A Wedding Ceremony, on Wednesday Evening.

The home of Mrs. Thomas Pritte, 451 Princess street, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, last evening, when the marriage of her daughter, Katie, to William McMillan, of this city, was solemnized. At 8.30 o'clock, the strains of the wedding march were being played, the happy pair arranged themselves beneath a pretty arch decorated with smilax, carnations and wedding bells, and Rev. William T. H. King, in the brief happy form of the Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony which made them man and wife. The bride looked charming in a dress of white duchesse satin trimmed with chiffon. She was given away by her brother, Richard Pritte. Miss Minnie Pritte, sister of the bride, also attired in white duchesse satin, performed the duties of bridesmaid, while Salem McMillan, cousin of the groom, was best man.

After the ceremony, the fifty happy guests repaired to the dining-room and partook of a sumptuous repast. The room was tastefully dressed with bouquets and floral decorations. The guests were arranged in the shape of a horseshoe and prettily decorated with dahlias, astors and carnations. The usual toasts were drunk and the many excellent qualities of the bride spoken of. The bride, who was greatly esteemed as a member of Cooke's church, in which congregation she has always taken an active interest, serving in the choir, Sabbath school and Victoria Guild, she will be greatly missed from these departments. The groom is one of Kingston's popular young men, a journeyman tailor and at present employed with Crawford & Walsh. Up to two years ago his home was in Brockville.

Mrs. McMillan was the recipient of many beautiful and costly presents from her numerous friends in the city and from Montreal, Brockville, Toronto, Salem, Mass., Ottawa, Napanee and Vernon. Amongst them were a carving set from Cooke's church choir; a picture from Victoria Guild; picture from her Sunday school class; handsome oil painting in frame, painted and signed by the groom, and a picture from her mother, sideboard from mother of the groom. The groom's presents, to the bride, included a gold watch, the bridesmaid a gold pin set with pearls.

The happy couple, amidst showers of rice, confetti, oil boots, and with a collection of friends, went to the bridal carriage, clanging and jingling, they sped away to the midnight express to Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

Upon their return, they will take up residence at 215 University street, Napanee and Mrs. McMillan will be at home by her friends after October 20th. The bride's going-away gown was a smart tailor-made suit of gray tweed suiting.

DISTRICT TELEPHONE LINE

Young, superintendent of construction, for the same company, are here from Watertown, N.Y., for the purpose of making a survey for a direct telephone line between Kingston and Watertown. At present telephone connection between these two places is given in honor of Miss Kinney, by way of Ogdensburg. What is needed is a line over Wolfe Island to connect with Cape Vincent. There is a Bell telephone line from Kingston to Wolfe Island. A survey was made to-day, with the result that satisfactory arrangements can be made for the construction of a line over the island. It is likely that work upon it will be shortly begun.

OBSERVANCE OF LAW

Will Be Best Course of Liquor Men.

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 28.—Referring to the article in the Christian Guardian, by Dr. Clowin, on the liquor situation in New Ontario, the provincial secretary, Hon. Mr. Mann, said today: "The liquor traffic is an alive to their own interests, they will not only strictly observe the law themselves, in New Ontario, but will see to it that others do likewise. Any other course on their part might justify a severe remedy. Dr. Clowin suggests in his article, regarding that part of the article in which he makes reference to new hotels being erected, that license were promised, but I can only say they have not the promise of a license in any case nor the prospect of one."

VERY HIGH BUILDING FOR THE TRADERS BANK IN TORONTO.

Description of Piers, Pillars and Other Foundation Work to Support the New Structure.

The natural foundation on which Toronto is built is the best known on this continent, consequently the excavation for the new Bank building at Yonge and Colborne streets has been the simplest mathematical proposition possible, says The Toronto News.

New York, built on a springy island, has to do with trouble with getting foundations for its skyscrapers. There it is necessary to bore clear down to the solid rocks, sometimes at millions of dollars' expense, which often for the reason of a reach, Chicago, built on a marsh, is in a similar predicament. Big buildings there are built up on steel foundations which thrust themselves far down into the sticky ooze on which the business part of Chicago trembles like a big lump of jelly. The steel foundations, unable to find rock in that prairie bottom, literally float like huge barges.

The subsoil of Toronto is remarkably firm, and its engineering problems comparatively simple. The chief difficulty is in springs of water which often force their way through the clay. Sometimes an old well is encountered fifty feet deep, requiring either to be bridged or filled up. Sometimes the bed of an ancient creek, which has been gradually obscured, is discovered. In making the excavation for the Alexandra Palace, for instance, the workmen found the bed of Garrison creek, which necessitated making a much deeper pit than was at first intended.

In finding a base for the Traders' Bank building a spring was discovered which, when dug down to, was found to be a natural spring, and down trying to get beneath it.

"And if we had stopped at fifteen feet," said Mr. H. S. Baker, the architect, "we should never have found that spring unless it had been discovered by the subsequent setting of the walls."

Twenty feet down goes the excavation for the Traders' Bank, with the exception of the water, which is pumped out and down trying to get beneath it.

"And if we had stopped at fifteen feet," said Mr. H. S. Baker, the architect, "we should never have found that spring unless it had been discovered by the subsequent setting of the walls."

WHAT A MARKER SAYS.

Rifle Shooting is Expensive—Cost At An O. R. A. Meet.

The man who comes to the Ontario Rifle Association's annual meeting at Long Branch from anywhere outside of Toronto is as a rule a man that can shoot. A few of them are combining pleasure with the outing, but as a rule the rifle shooting is an expensive sport and the competitor wants to make his expenses. The average marksman does well if he does cover expenses.

A marker stands in the pit in the shelter trench facing the target. The shelter trench is about 3 feet high. The targets for the platform where the marker stands is 3 feet. He has that much protection.

"If they really hit the target in front of my target gazing upwards at the face of the target to see where a shot strikes I can usually tell by the sound of the bullet as it hits the target. I strike it step forward and pull the target down and after locating the shot I raise the signal showing the value of the shot."

The following notice has been posted in several places in the new Hotel Normandie, Clinton: "Take notice that no one under 21 years of age will be allowed in the bar-room or sold intoxicating liquor. It will be considered a favor, if anyone, knowing a young man to be under age frequenting the bar, will report same at the office." All hotelkeepers should make the same rule, and strictly adhere to it.

His Passion.

"I was examined for life insurance to-day," said Mr. Timmons. "I'm afraid I'll be turned down."

"Oh, my! Why?" asked Miss Coy.

"While the doctor was examining my heart I unfortunately got to thinking of you, and it jumped something awful."

Senator Wark's Piety.

In his private life, as in the public eye, Senator Wark was simple and unaffected. His view of life was well illustrated in a letter he wrote for the young readers of The Globe on the occasion of his 100th birthday, which he concluded as follows:—"I now ask my young readers to open the Bible at the 25th chapter of Matthew and read from the 1st verse to the end, and learn that, whether life is long or short, the important point is to be prepared for its end."

HUMMING BIRDS.

William Leavitt Finley's Interesting Description of Their Hatching.

At first the little capsules of humming birds' eggs had a wonderfully delicate flash that of pink, writes W. L. Finley in The Country Calendar. Then, one morning, I stood over the nest like Thomas of old. Some one had replaced the eggs with two tiny black bugs! It might have been a miracle. There was a tiny knob on the end of each little bug that looked as if it might be the beginning of a bill. Each little creature resembled a black bean more than a bird, for each possessed a light streak of brown down the middle of the back. They couldn't be beans, for they were pulsing with life in a lumpy sort of way. I went frequently to look at them. In a few days the little nestlings began to fork out all over with tiny black horns, until they would have looked like prickly pears had they been the right color. At the next stage each tiny horn began to blossom out into a spray of brown down, the yellow at one end and green at the other. The black skin cracked a trifle and showed two eyes. It was hard to see just how these black bugs could turn to birds, but day after day the miracle worked until I really saw two young humming birds.

When I first crawled in among the bushes close to the nest the little mother darted at me and pouted a foot from my nose, as if to stare me out of countenance. She looked me all over from head to foot twice, then she seemed convinced that I was harmless. She whirled and sat on the nest-edge. The bustling spirit was at the baby's mouth. She spread her tail like a flicker, and braced herself against the nest-side. She craned her neck, and drew her dagger-like bill straight up above the nest. She plunged it down the baby's throat to the hilt, and started a series of gestures that seemed fashioned to puncture him to the toes. Then she stabbed the other baby until it made me shudder. It looked like the murder of the infants. But they were not mangled and bloody; they were getting a square meal after the usual humming-bird method of regurgitation. They ran out their slender tongues to lick the honey from their lips. How they liked it! Then she settled down and ruffled up her breast feathers to let her babies cuddle close to her naked bosom. Occasionally she reached under to caress them with wisps of mother-love.

Ramble in the Far North.

Since the historic day when the Union Jack was hoisted on Ellesmere Land, the possibilities of Canada, with country in the far north, with the peculiar and interesting characteristics of its people, have loomed largely before the public, and there is a natural and ever-increasing desire on the part of Canadians to learn more of their wonderful fellow-subjects who now form an integral part of our vast Dominion. The late Mr. P. E. Rowe, Bishop of Alaska, delivered a lecture on "A Ramble in the Far North." He gave some vivid descriptions of the lives and habits of the Eskimau people.

After speaking of the ancestry of the people, and mentioning the ancient capital of Russian America, where the old Greek Church still stands, with its fine paintings and beautiful mosaics on the walls, Bishop Rowe went on to allude to the Eskimau people, and the following word picture will be of interest: "I have seen them," he said, "in such numbers as to make me doubt very much whether it would be possible to lift up such creatures and make them what we would regard as human beings. They seem so low down and so degraded, but they live under conditions that help to make them so. They do not always cook their food, and certainly never in water. They use blubber to melt ice, so as to obtain water, but they do not use the water for any other purpose. They oil themselves instead of washing, and at the end of winter you would, in order to discover their true nature, have to go through a process of exorcism."

Dr. Rowe mentioned that the Eskimau eat a good deal of whale, which was not so bad when it was cooked, but even then a white man required a very keen appetite, and to shut his eyes before he could get through with it. He also gave some interesting instances of how the Eskimau women brought their refractory husbands into submission and obedience by a few judicious clouts with a snowshoe. The people generally were fond of sending each other presents, but always expected something in return. The Eskimau on the same lines, remarked the Bishop merrily, as more civilized folk give a dinner, and look for the compliment to be reciprocated. In order that the might get on well with the white tribes, it was necessary for them to assume to be of great power, equal, if not superior to that of the chiefs themselves. Dr. Rowe alluded to the region of the midnight sun across the Arctic Circle. There, he said, the sun illumined the vast fields of ice with a splendor which was beyond the power of the artist to paint, or the tongue of man to describe.
