ROCKEFELLER'S
 Many who do not realize what lies beyond, treat an attack of the nerves, with indifference. Others consider it will soon pass away. But in every case nervousness is a calamity. Only one remedy will cure it—Rockefeller's—nerve strengthener that acts through the blood. First it gives you appetite—you eat plenty. This fills the blood with nourishment for the inner nerve cells. Energy and strength is instilled into every part of the system. You get well—keep well—nervousness forever departs, because you've used Rockefeller's. Price, 50c. per box of fifty tablets at all dealers.

CATARAQUI METHODISTS
 Held Successful Anniversary Last Sunday.

The anniversary of the Methodist church, (Cataraqui), was a decided success. On Sunday, the 8th, memorable sermons were preached by Rev. W. H. Sparling, B.A., president of the Montreal conference, and Rev. Charles E. Manning, of Sydenham street church, Kingston.

The annual tea, which was given on Thursday evening, the 12th, was excellent indeed. A large audience was present, and were delighted, instructed, amused, and stimulated, by addresses from Revs. J. M. Shaver, W. H. Sparling, B.A., W. Craig, and R. St. John.

The musical part of the programme was rich and varied. Solos were rendered by Mrs. Stillwell, Mrs. Vanhook, and Mr. Marshall; duets were given by Mrs. Watson, Vancouver, and her sister, Mrs. Stillwell, also by Messrs. Williams and Armstrong, of the city; quartettes were furnished by the Williams brothers, and Messrs. Marshall and Armstrong. Miss Cook presided with her usual skill at the organ, while Dr. Edwards made a model chairman.

TALK FORESTRY
 A CONVENTION TO BE HELD IN OTTAWA.

Under Auspices of Dominion and Provincial Governments—History of the Forestry Movement.

The announcement of a Canadian Forestry Convention having the support of the Dominion and Provincial Governments to be held in Ottawa on the 10th, 11th and 12th January, 1906, is an important one for the Dominion, for the forests are one of her best assets and anything that will preserve them and increase their value is deserving of every consideration.

Finding the trees growing in maturity on the forest lands little attention was given to the fact that they are living capitals, the value of which may be ascertained and by the control of which their development may be regulated. Forests have been classed with minerals. The more they are taken away, the less is left, and would or could be left. The fact that where trees grew and flourished they could grow again was not thought of. At a recent time the forests were cut or burnt from good and poor land alike and there are throughout Canada large tracts of land producing nothing, which might have been made into valuable forests and which may still be if only proper means are taken to that end.

The value of forest products for 1901, according to the statistics for 1901, 600,000 and Provincial Governments which control their own lands derive large revenues from their forests. Strike out the item of forest revenues from the provincial budgets and the large amounts thus raised must be provided by direct taxation in some other form. The public interest in the question of forest preservation is therefore great.

It may be interesting to sketch the history of the forestry movement which is thus reaching such an important stage in its development. The question was agitated for many years by Sir Henri Joly de Lotbiniere, Mr. William Little and others, and in 1882 the Forestry Congress was held in Montreal, representing the United States and Canada, to consider the subject and devise means of dealing with it. There was a large attendance of leading men from the United States and Canada and during the two or three days' deliberations a number of valuable papers were read and in the discussions a great deal of interesting and useful information was brought out. The results were somewhat ephemeral, however, as, although the proceedings were widely reported in the newspapers, a considerable public interest was aroused, the pressure of necessity was not felt in the same way as it is at the present time and no serious effort was made to keep the matter before the public. At this convention, however, the American Forestry Congress was organized which met later in the City of Quebec in 1892.

The most far-reaching result of this convention was the adoption of the fire-rangering system which has done so much to preserve the forests of Canada, and which was undoubtedly an almost direct result of the stimulus given to the interest in the subject. This system was first adopted in Ontario in 1895 and the other provinces have been one after another following this example. The convention was therefore far from fruitless and if the saving of timber from fire-rangering, the fire-rangers accomplished can be credited in any way to that convention it certainly has more than justified to the people of Canada the calling of it together.

The different Governments continued to work out their forest administration on individual lines, but in only one province, Ontario, were there any officers appointed to make the investigations of this question his particular sphere of work. This branch has done splendid work under the charge of Mr. Southwell. In 1899 a Superintendent of Forestry for the Dominion was appointed and shortly afterwards Mr. Stewart, the superintendent, called a meeting of the Dominion Forestry Association. This association has held meetings each year and has published a great many valuable reports and papers. It has been steadily keeping the question of the forests before the public and that it has done so in a wise and practical way is evidenced by the fact that it has the support of those whose interest in the forest is personal as well as of a large number who are interested from the public standpoint. Among the supporters are such leading lumbermen as J. R. Booth, Hon. W. C. Edwards, Hiram Robinson, H. M. Price; leading business men like Dr. McNeill, general manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway; E. Walker, general manager of the Bank of Commerce, and many others; leading educators like the Principal of the University of Toronto and of Queen's University.

The persevering work of the association has brought the subject to the point where the Federal Government has thought it a wise policy to call together a Dominion convention to consider the subject. Representatives will be called from the Provincial Governments, the lumbermen's associations, Boards of Trade, universities and agricultural colleges, farmers' institutes and other organizations.

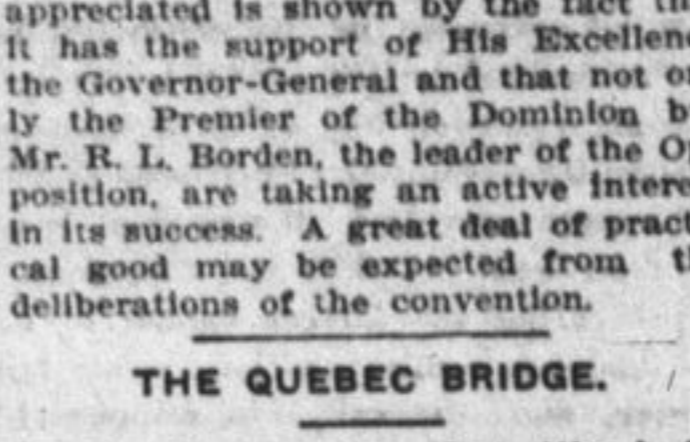

The main divisions in which the subject will be considered will include the National Interest in the Forest, the Relations of the Forest and the Lumber, Pulp and Other Industries of the Country, Forestry in Relation to Agriculture, the Influence of the Forests on Water Powers and Irrigation, Reproduction of the Forest. All these are vital questions, and it is most important that are before the public for solution to-day. Forestry experts in Europe are looking to Canada as one of the world's great standing timber reserves, and the lumbermen realize the increasing value of their holdings; the Governments appreciate the significance of the large forest subject in their budgets; the lumbermen see more clearly the protective and direct value of forests and woodlands; and the railways and other industries feel the increasing scarcity of other fuel supplies they require.

At the Forest Congress held in Washington in January last it was made clear that the United States consider the situation of a grave one in so far as their country is concerned. President

The QUEBEC BRIDGE.
 To Be One of the Most Wonderful Structures in the World.

The new Quebec bridge which is to span the River St. Lawrence from the Chaudiere on the north side to Cap Rouge on the north side, seven miles west of Quebec, will, when completed, be one of the most wonderful structures in the world.

The weight of metal to be put in the structure will be 32,000 tons, and up to the present only 2,000 tons have been placed in position. The false work alone that had to be erected before anything could be done on the superstructure is a regular bridge in itself, and when it has done duty on one side will be taken down and rebuilt on the other side of the river to promote the erection of the metal parts to be used in putting together the gigantic structure weigh from five to one hundred tons each, according to size and the importance of their relative positions. The Phoenixville Bridge Co. of Phoenixville, who have the contract, were obliged to construct new machinery and enlarge their mills to manufacture these parts, which are the largest ever used in bridge work the world over. Special cars had to be constructed to carry the metal from the mills to the Chaudiere, where electric traveling cranes were erected to handle the same.

The approach work from the Chaudiere or main line of the I. C. R. and C. P. R. is a big contract in itself, and besides three miles of trestle work, rock cutting, and culverts, includes a steel bridge eight hundred feet in length across the Chaudiere River. The main bridge is now well under way, and the contractors for the work feel confident that it will be completed by the fall of 1907, barring unforeseen accidents. The bridge runs out from the shore to the main pier. All the bottom chords, eleven in number, weighing from sixty to ninety tons each, are laid, and the floor system of the main pier is nearly completed. Two shoes weighing seventy-five tons each, are being placed at the main pier, and the pins to hold them, six feet ten inches long and twenty-four inches in diameter, weighing five tons each, are being hammered into position.

Difficult Trip to the Mackenzie.
 An interesting peep into the difficulties attending a trip to the Mackenzie River district more than thirty years ago was given at St. James' cathedral, Toronto, recently by Bishop Rogers, the missionary in that faraway diocese. Thirty-six years ago, when he and his wife had first gone to Mackenzie, there was no communication between Montreal and Western Canada. They had to go to New York and travel from there to Minnesota. Then they went four days by wagon and four more down the Red River to Fort Garry. Then they traveled nearly three months more in an open boat, manned by Indians and halfbreeds. Month after month they pushed along until Fort Simpson was reached, on the Mackenzie River. Three and a half months previously they had finished the railway part of the journey. To obtain supplies they had to write out a list two years before the goods reached them. Letters were received but twice a year, and the latest news was five months old. The nearest doctor was 2,000 miles away. To-day they received their letters four times a year, and the railway came to within 1,100 miles of them. Supplies were brought in once a week. He was a new diocese of Athabaska was required.

Three South Africa Heroes.
 At a drum-head service in which Sir Frederick Borden, Minister of Militia, took part, Vancouver, B. C., has just seen the unveiling of a tablet to the Vancouver heroes who laid down their lives in the Boer war. The three South African campaigners whose memory is thus honored were Private W. Jackson, Private W. F. Whitley and Trooper J. C. Mackintosh. Jackson and Whitley served in the Second Royal Canadian Regiment, and Mackintosh in the Strathcona Horse. All belonged to the 4th Regiment, Duke of Connaught's Own Rifles, of Vancouver. Sir Frederick was especially moved by the service, for he lost his only son in South Africa. Jackson and Whitley were in the vanguard when Cronje was run to earth, while Mackintosh died of enteric fever at Bloemfontein.

The Common Soldier.
 In the long run, if the men who do the fighting do not like their part of the bargain, they will find a way to get it broken. Modern soldiers are likely to afford much amusement to the rank-and-file, nor, indeed, to the junior officers. Trench-digging, hiding in a shower of bullets, which they are ordered to do, and lying out in the open for days suffering from wounds and fever because no one dare go to you through the zone of fire, always fighting in the dark, seldom seeing the foe; these are not the circumstances of glorious war. The common soldier will tire of this very soon; but when he is really tired and then is given the halloo war governments will hear from him.—Montreal Star.

HIS DEATH WAS SUDDEN.
 Former Toronto Policeman Dies at Mississippi.
 Mississippi, Oct. 13.—Thomas Nichol, night watchman at the Allan Bros. mill, died suddenly on the 6th. On that morning he returned from work, ate a usual breakfast, and retired for rest and sleep. At 11 a.m., his wife went silently to his bedside where she found him in death. The result of autopsy, Mr. Nichol, up till a couple of years ago, was a man of excellent physique, served several years on the police force in Toronto, and seemingly ever since his name here, incessant troubles plagued upon him. He spent several months in the Kingston General Hospital with an infected foot, and during his time in that institution his little daughter was drowned at his home here. He spent last winter in Toronto and in the spring came home and started on duty in the mill feeling in the best of health. He only worked there but a couple of months when he met with an accident, which nearly severed his hands. Having only recovered from this last affliction about three weeks ago sufficient to resume work, again death takes him from his world of troubles at the age of forty-four years. His family, a wife and three small children, are left in a pitiable condition. The funeral occurred on Sunday and was largely attended.

WILL MEET IN MONTREAL.
 Next Methodist Conference in St. James Church.
 Toronto, Oct. 14.—The special committee of the Methodist general conference, unanimously decided, after considering the claims of Toronto and Vancouver, that the next meeting of the central conference should be held in St. James' church, Montreal, commencing September 12th, 1906.

A Purse For Shanks.
 Winning Prize Press.
 A surprise was sprung on R. B. Shanks, P.G.M., when W. J. Morley, P.G., on behalf of North Star Lodge, No. 2, I.O.O.F., presented him with a purse of $150 in gold. Mr. Shanks had just returned from attending the sovereign grand lodge at Philadelphia, and his lodge here thought it fitting to express to him their appreciation of his services. In the subordinate lodge, in the grand lodge and in Vancouver, that the next meeting of the sovereign grand lodge at Philadelphia, which he brings from the sovereign grand lodge, P. G. M. Shanks replied in fitting terms and promised to give a report of his trip to Philadelphia.

Don't put it off any longer, but go to Chown's drug store and get a pair of perfect fitting glasses. Satisfaction and a perfect fit guaranteed.
