REGRET EXPRESSED

Over Inability of John Burns to Speak at Queen's. Much regret is expressed that John Burns, M.P., has found himself un able to accept Principal Gordon's in vitation to address a meeting of citi zens and students in Grant hall, When he and J. Allen Baker returned to Ontario they found Western Canada had demanded more of their limited time than they had anticipated, and that they would have to forego some long anticipated objects of their visit elsewhere, Mr. Burns was therefore necessitated to decline calls from many

Travel made easy, isn't it? am not going to write of any adventures or exploits by the way, but to amuse some of our citizens by the following fact. Leaving Chicago, an intelligent looking young conductor took up my ticket and after reading it, over said: "I never heard of the Kingston & Pembroke railway before." It almost knocked me down, but I rallied sufficiently to let him know it was a case of "happy is the country which has no history." And on the K. & P. the trains ran so constantly on scheduled time; kept so persistently on the rails and off the ties; refused so stealily to give an exhibition, either of a head-on or rear-end collision, the road did not get a chance to appear much in print. THE LOCKETT SHOE STORE

By Franklin H. Wentworth. If you get off the train at Moylan an unpretentious little station thir teen miles southwest of Philadelphia turn down the road to the left and come to a point at which the road forks, you will see an artistic little finger-board pointing down the hill bearing the inscription: "One-half mil to Rose Valley." This hill is thickly wooded at this point, but when you have gone on a few paces and rounded a little knoll, Rose Valley lies before you. Although there are no massiv mountain peaks thrusting their white points into the blue to accentuate the attractions of the valley, there ye comes to one in looking at this Penn sylvania landscape a feeling singularly akin to that engendered by the firs view of some of the most attractiv of the Swiss valleys. Charles Battell Loomis says tha the most interesting thing to be seen in Europe is the American tourist and travellers returning from the Ori ent say the only blot upon a Japan ese landscape is the house built by ar occidental. Perhaps the charm Swiss valley holds for one spring from the fact that the contribution made by man there do not affron him. Such is undoubtedly the charm of this little Pennsylvania valley, a ground, with traditions of Washingto and other revolutionary heroes; an the bottom of which winds Ridle creek. All about here is histori yet, though so close to the great city of Phildelphia, the world curiously has moved past it. Forty or fifty years ago Ridle Creek, with its modest little thirty five horse-power, was turning th wheels of a number of small mills The principal industry was snuff-mal ing. Around these mills at attractiv points of vantage clustered ston houses. Both houses and mills wer given walls like those of a medieve castle. It was before the present er of cheap and shoddy structures. Polite society abandoned enuff-mal taking and the snuff makers abandor ed Ross Valley, leaving their stor houses and their stone mills empty machinery and all human occupancy For twenty years Rose Valley was well-nigh deserted village and the wa ers of Ridley Creek rippled away t the sea without turning a wheel, it possibilities in dynamic being too lin ited to attract the great factories modern industrialism. Here the wi roses grew unplucked in riotous pro fligacy, and the valley justified i name; the name given to it in a me ment of admiration by the first Epi copal bishop of Philadelphia, Bisho in the early spring of the year 1901 two men of Philadelphia Sunday morning tramp came to t brow of the bill and looked down in
