The Labour Gain.

The labour party has made great gains in England, according to th results of the recent municipal elections. The local contests may not be as sharply contested along political but labour energy is the same everywhere, and it rejoices the leaders of the party when they find themselves in a position to make their impres upon passing legislation.

John Burns, when in Canada, predicted that the labour party would be stronger in the next parliament. and Burns is a keen observer of th times and an authority on every question which affects the workingmen. The returns of the municipal elections as compared with 1899 and 1902. second hand, all cheap at 114 Gore shows that the liberals have varied in power, though latterly weaker, the HE ROTHWELL FARM, LOT 38, 1ST independents have remained practical ly stationary, the Unionists have been containing about 330 acres. The Indemnity Act. The indemnity act is the issue the bye-elections. As it is so largely occupying the people's minds the baters deal almost entirely with it and there is a pretty general understanding that the act will be amended at the next session of parliament. Speaking at Sarnia, Hop. Mr. Hyman said that the member of parliament did not get, under the act, straight increase of $1,000 a year in his allowance. The mileage had been cut off now that the Canadian railways are obliged to carry members free, though it is a most mreason able proposition and this meant a considerable saving. However, so strong was public opinion against it that the premier had consented to a consideration of the act and its pro-Thus a second minister has spoken

It is these unionists that Mr. Balfour fears, though there are many conservatives who will rather see their party out of power than in it and committed to a protectionist policy, The premier has essayed mild coercion by calling the attention of his party to the fact that "there is no use in having a leader unless you mean to dugglers, sword swallowers and magicians travel all the way around the world, stopping at the big cities and usually paying their respects to the ulers of the regions visited. Thus it was that a magician, well known in London and New York, found himself at one time in the presence of the king of the Maoris. Turn to a map of the great South Seas, put a finger on New Zealand, and you will have indicated the country of the Maoris, Well, after some parleying, it was decided that his dusky highness himself should conceal an article which the magician should discover. The mindreader left the room, and after a while was brought back blindfolded. He cogitated for a moment and then exclaimed that the hidden article was in the king's mouth. His majesty shook his head savagely. The "professor" mouth should be opened wide. The king refused. The "professor" around. By and by the king's mouth was slowly and reluctantly opened. The lost article-a button-was not there! The next instant, however, the king began to cough. He tried to hold in, but couldn't. He coughed up the button, which he had tried to swallow. The Maoris were uproarious with mirth. They didn't know which to admire the more—the wisdom the magician or the heroism of the

and Again. The origin of sewing cotton was told at a cotton manufacturers' meeting by the head of the great thread house of Paisley, Scotland. It was discovered in 1803 by his grandfather, who had a little business in Paisley, making silk twine for heddles, which were used by every weaver. The silk came from Hamburg, and in 1803 Napoleon caused the stock held there to be burned, in order to hamper British trade, The weavers were in distress, but James Clark conceived the idea that cotton yarns could be twisted together to

The experiment succeeded, and from At a meeting of the Stratford board be substituted for flax in the manufacof trades a resolution in favor of the ture of the thread in a very small way. It was at first put up in skeins, and had to be wound into little balls by the purchaser, and then Mr. Clark invented the modern spools. He had them made by a wood-turner, had a gross at a time. They cost him six pence a dozen, and he charged the pur chaser of the thread a halfpenny for Rev. Dr. Bryce has received from the spool, which, however, was refunded when the spool was returned. The ladies of Paisley used to come to his shops with their spools, and wait while he wound the thread on them From this small beginning grew a great industry.
