Afraid Of Criticism.

The defence of the New York insurance companies is that notwithstanding their wastefulness and extravagance, they were sound financially.

One gets a new glimpse at them through the evidence of John A. Nichols, a lawyer, who has been employed, for generous retainers, to do service for the "big three." He has had numerous contracts, of a more or less mysterious nature, since the facts were disguised and the vouchers were deceitful.

Among the other assailants of the large corporations was Mr. Manning, of Albany, an actuary, who knew enough about the companies to criticize them severely. He had to be silenced and so Mr. Nichols was commissioned to buy him off. He succeeded though, according to a letter which he sent to Senator Depew. Manning was at times very "contumacious," and hard to please.

Now if the companies were all right—if their procedure, apart from the extreme prodigality of the management, for the benefit of friends and relatives and hangers-on—what had they to fear from Mr. Manning? And yet they had a lawyer whom it cost a large sum annually to take care of these erratic critics, and it cost a still larger sum to quiet them. The insurance mess becomes the worse under the probing of Mr. Hughes.

Fortunes Of The Farmer.

Before the tariff commission a representative farmer appeared, and, in contending against higher duties, or against any increase in the tariff as suggested by the manufacturers, made a remarkable statement.

It was to the effect that the average farmer did not make much money. To prove it he adopted a line of argument entirely his own. He took the yearly product of the farm, as given in the bureau of industries, and divided the total value by the number of farm owners, and the result was a little over $700 for each one.

Now two things are known, (1) that the statistics published by the bureau of industries are not absolutely correct, being mere approximations, and, (2), that the earnings of the average farmer are far more than $700. Some men have cleared more than that amount from the ches alone, and not a few twice that sum.

Indeed a contemporary fairly presented the position of the farmer when he said that he had had a good season, and that it was his to enjoy the winter season, to eat, drink and be merry, for he had worked hard, Providence had been good to him, and he could be happy.

Yes, the soil is the source of much wealth, and the young man who can content himself on the farm is the independent man. He is rewarded for his thrift, and if he does not become a millionaire he certainly amasses a competence, and that is all he should desire.

Trouble For Whitney.

There is a preparation for trouble before the party heeler and the Whitney government. The clamour for office is not to be silenced. Those who are hungry for public places, for permission to feed at the public crib, are going to force the issue. At least so it is said.

The combine is alleged to include many of the conservative members of the legislature. Dr. Beattie Nesbitt is the head and leader of the throng. He has been expressing himself in terms that have been somewhat vague, but it is understood that, in effect, he is with the Belleville contingent who want the government to vacate the public offices as the members may demand, and without any more evidence than will satisfy these members of the expediency of the proceeding.

The Mail, which is not troubled usually upon this point, or of any point that concerns the party, warns certain people that conservatives take no notice of the spoils system.

The Montreal Gazette, cannot make itself believe that Nesbitt and Ganev are uniting in an attack upon the government, "for both must know," it observes, "that such a course would be the nearest form of political suicide." Moreover, the Gazette is sure that "any effort to compel Mr. Whitney to adopt the 'spoils system' would be fatal to those who tried it."

Which is sound enough reasoning, but it will not terrize Nesbitt, Ganev, and men of that kind. They are out for the stuff and they are not going to be deceived. They can wreck if they cannot rule. Evidently the anxieties of the premier have set in with a rush.

Echoes Of The Elections.

An analysis of the votes cast in the bye-elections reveals the fact that the successes of the liberal candidates have been really remarkable.

In North York the farmer was pitted against the lawyer, and all the ingenuity of the conservative party was exerted in vain to prejudice the cause of Hon. Mr. Aylesworth. He won by a majority of 500, which is significant when it is remembered that the former member, Sir William Mulock, made in five successive elections the following scores: 109, 295, 363, 696, and 297.

In addition, in the last local election, a conservative was elected for the same constituency, and the local member was out hot-footed after Mr. Aylesworth. North York has, therefore, been released. That is the expression used by the postmaster-general, and it is the proper one.

In West Lambton the late member was Dr. Johnston, a most popular man, and one who had won the favour and confidence of the people. He had a majority of 447, in the last election, while his successor has 337, and the full returns are not yet in. The exhibit is very much to the credit of young Mr. Pardee.

In Antigonish, N.S., the liberals are delighted with the result, and say it is not to be compared with the result of the last election. Why? Then Mr. Melisac was opposed by a weak candidate, and he had practically a walk-over. In the bye-election the liberal, Mr. Chisholm, had as an opponent Mr. Girrior, who had been through two campaigns and who, because of his French descent, particularly appealed to the Acadians. Mr. Chisholm's majority of 284, under these circumstances, is something to boast of.

Wentworth is the only loss the liberals sustained. It gave Mr. Sealey the seat in the general elections by twenty. It gave Mr. Smith it in the bye-elections by eight—provided the count be correct.

In view of all this Mr. Borden's rejoicings, over reduced majorities, appear to be somewhat heartless. For small mercies he is exceedingly thankful.

Editorial Notes.

It now comes out that the railway officials have been riding about the country in private cars. No luxury is too good for them.

The Montreal Star, likes the salary grab to an attempt to sandbag the people into silence, and the people are harking back and making the politicians tremble!

A. C. Pratt, M.P.P., returned from hunting, says the use of dogs must be prohibited or deer will become extinct. He proposes legislation accordingly.

Dr. Nesbitt, Mr. Ganev and Mr. Crawford, members of the legislature, will force a change in the government so that the spoils of office may be at the disposal of the party. Who are they going to retire?

Oh, Mr. Tarball, how could you? Insured himself and family in the Equitable, and got the commissions on first premiums and renewals. And thinks it is all right. Custom and conscience will not be reconciled.

The Catholic Register is after the member of the Whitney government who recently slandered the Catholics, through the Orange Sentinel, and cannot locate him. Some one is not nearly so brave as he wanted to appear.

Mr. Borden, the alleged leader of the opposition, was thankful that the liberal majorities in the bye-elections were not as large as had been called up in the general election. It was a moral victory, and we all know how comforting it must be.

The Toronto News is disgusted with the conservative party, since its defeat in 1896. It says the party has had "neither purpose, unity nor energy." It has failed to "attack with consistency, moderation and sanity."

The interests involved in the combines, on which the crown officers are focusing their attention, represent $100,000,000. The man who organized them was making in royalties and fees, $40,000. Who was paying that? The people. They pay for everything.

The Montreal Gazette does not take much stock in the clamour about life insurance in Canada. There is nothing about the business to cause discontent, but the element of expense is "unduly high." Better to do less business and save the people's money.

The revelations so far in the New York election case are disappointing. There have been some irregularities, and some rascalities. But the proportion will have to increase very much to warrant the conclusion that the mayoralty has been stolen from Mr. Hearst.

James Clark, born in England ninety years ago, and one of Thurlo's oldest residents, is dead. He was much respected. An aged widow and one son survive.

DISEASE SHOWN BY WRITING.

Penmanship Asserted to be a Help in Diagnosis.

That a patient's penmanship may be an aid to the diagnosis of disease is contended by a French medical man, an account of whose investigation along these lines is translated by the Literary Digest from the Revue Scientifique.

According to this article the system is not the same as graphology. "The physician takes into account not only the graphic character, but the writing, the spelling, the syntax, the style and the ideas; he has in mind not only the writing itself, but its application."

"Nevertheless, there are facts common to this subject and graphology, without investigation of the delicate connection that may exist between the motor manifestations of handwriting and traits of character of intellectual and moral qualities; the task is on a larger scale, for pathologic alterations may be marked in handwriting by very accentuated characteristics."

"Several authors have already sought to find the signs of diagnosis in handwriting. Mr. Rogues de Fursac, by direct examination of a large number of patients * * * has made up a collection that has real clinical interest."

"After having examined elementary calligraphic peculiarities, such as the general form of the writing, the direction of lines and letters, etc., Mr. Rogues de Fursac studies the alterations in graphic images by effacement or by agraphia (partial loss of memory), or by general weakening of the memory, more or less accentuated amnesia."

Lack of attention is clearly marked by the failure or inability to copy, and mental automatism is shown by substitutions, transpositions, additions, stereotypic, graphic impulsion, etc."

"A second part of the volume is devoted to the examination of various characteristic mental maladies—especially nervous affections of motor manifestation, with the handwriting characteristic of shaking pals, chorea, tabes, writer's cramp, etc."

Toronto Star.
Mrs. Hubbard discovered that glass makes a fine substitute for lint as a dressing for wounds. It is also believed it ought to help some when a chap has a pane in his little insides.

Mrs. Hubbard A Canadian.

According to Dr. Morgan, the Canadian biographer, Mrs. Hubbard, the brave, true woman, who has just returned from her adventurous journey into the wilds of Labrador, to discover the secret of her late husband's failure and subsequent death in that bleak and inhospitable country, is one of our own country women. The daughter of James Benson, a farmer of Bewley, township of Hamilton county of Northumberland, Ont., she, as a young girl, qualified as a trained nurse, and while in the performance of her duties, in New York, where she was called upon to nurse Dr. Leonard Hubbard, Jr., through a serious illness. It was a case, on his part, of love at first sight, with marriage, as the result. In 1903, her husband in exploring the wastes of Labrador, met his death.

An Old Custom Abolished.

The corporation of Peterboro has decided to abolish the ancient custom of publicly proclaiming the opening of the October fair. The charter for 150 years ago, in the reign of Henry VI., and its opening was an annual made the occasion of a religious ceremony by the Benedictine monks. Latterly the city fathers were wont to march from the Guildhall to the town bridge, where the town crier read the proclamation. Many of the citizens object to the ancient custom being allowed to die.
