 THIS IS THE POINT

There's no use buying coal unless it's the right sort. The "right sort" means well screened, full weight, leaving as little ash as possible, and that's the only kind we handle. Of course the ever present element in coal, as well as in every other commodity, is price. We are right on that too, as you will find for yourself on inquiry.

Social Reforms On Trial.
 The social reformers the world over will be interested in the success of Hon. Richard Seddon, the premier of New Zealand. He came into power in 1900, as one of the liberal leaders, having fought his way upward to recognition through the municipal institutions of the colony.
 It was in 1893 that he became first minister, and launched his old age pension scheme.
 There could be nothing more radical in the way of legislation, but New Zealand is willing to try anything which promises to add to the comfort and happiness of the people.
 Though old age pensions were popular with the masses—though the subject was cordially endorsed during the elections, having been debated by the people, and passed upon—the smart-revisted Mr. Seddon's measure and at first defeated it. Its passage, through the house eventually was like the passage of the Franchise Act some years ago, through the Canadian commons. It was fought at every stage. The masses approved, the classes objected.
 "The graded tax, and land reclamation affected chiefly the big land owners; government loans hit the money power; arbitration was distrusted by a considerable body of employers, but all these people and many others were involved in the taxation that might be necessary to meet the pension disbursements," said Prof. Parsons, writing to Human Life upon the question.
 More remarkable still the measure has been tried for five years, and it must have been fairly successful when the government which backed it and gave it effect has again been so freely endorsed. "Insurance without premiums," is quite a scheme. Does it contribute towards thrift? Undoubtedly. Men, and women, too, look forward to the time when, at the age of sixty-five, and lacking support to maintain themselves, they will be helped out of the public purse. Pauperism is not encouraged, but industry and economy, and as Dr. Parsons remarks: "It is good statesmanship to use the hope of an annuity as an additional motive to morality."
 The success of the old age pensions in New Zealand will make some people think that it should be tried in America, and the reason for it is the more apparent when the grafters have sickened the people with life insurance.

Hitting The Combine.
 The combines have received a heavy blow by the court which investigated the Master Plumbers' Association and the Central Supply Association, both organizations having the practical control of the trade in Toronto and vicinity.
 For years there has been a co-operation among those engaged in plumbing supplies, and results were costly to all who had occasion for them. The plumbers had a perfect organization among themselves. It meant no competition. The system of tendering was such that all hands had a benefit. One got the job at his figure, but he added a sum which went to the other tenderers the spoils or plunder of the system.
 The people were their victims. The man who patronized any firm for two years was his for life, and could not hire any other firm to do his work.
 Then there were the rebates from the supply houses, the exactions on behalf of the combine, the limiting of supplies to the one class of men, the general scheme of making all men have a use for them pay their prices and comply with their condition.
 "One hardly knows," said Judge Clute in imposing a fine of $5,000 each on the master plumbers and steamfitters and the Central Supply Association, "how to express myself in reference to disclosures such as we have had in regard to the bonus system. A number of hitherto reputable men meet around a table and, under the pretence of sending in invited tenders, deliberately adopt a method by which, without apparently the slightest compunction, they took from that portion of the public who happened to be interested, money to which they had no possible claim; no more claim than any person meeting another upon the street, and by force robbing him of what he had. Indeed I think that offence rather the least offensive. Here they adopt a system of misrepresentation and fraud in order to induce persons inviting tenders to believe that the tenders were reasonable and fair when for at least two or three years it was admitted that not one single honest tender had come from this association."
 That one extract of the judge's address is indicative of the whole of it, and marks the impression which the evidence made upon his mind. There was skill and diplomacy used in trying to conceal the operations of the combine, but they came out and the government will be impressed with them in considering the tariff revision.

Editorial Notes.
 Ottawa has been generous with its public school teachers. It has added $5,000 to the salary list.
 Jerome and Ryan are going to collide. The millionaire stockholder will tell what he knows about the Equitable or go to jail.
 Ald. Hoag is exercised about the Williamsville light, as he has a need to be. What about the street railway? How did he vote on that?
 The master plumbers and the supply men in Toronto, can afford to pay a few thousand in fines. They have been robbing the people for the last two or three years.
 Witte is having the time of his life. He has formed a government which is unequal to the emergencies of the hour. The people won't give it a chance to show what it can do.
 The British government will not promise home rule for Ireland. The leader has been favourable towards it, but his cabinet will not undertake it. Redmond has gone off too soon.
 The Winnipeg Tribune, independent, and usually anti-liberal, has it that Mr. Whitney, of Ontario, has started on the steep and well-oiled road that leads to destruction. "He will continue," says the Tribune, "to slide which showed how the danger could be avoided.

 The case prepared by the city—under direction of men who owed their power to their politics—convinced the railway committee that the depot crossing was really dangerous, and it made an order that the Grand Trunk should provide the bridge at a subway while the city and the company—jointly and equally interested according to their own showing—should provide the approaches.
 Then there was the fuss. The city tried every expedient it could to back out of the case. It spent hundreds of dollars in having a reconsideration of the issue by the railway committee and the exchequer court, and to no purpose. Mr. Mowat was the county's solicitor before he became a member of the city council, and he acted for the county subsequently until the city was cast out of court.
 Mr. Mowat did not ask the city to jump into this difficulty. He did not encourage it to waste its money on the subway. It got into this compromising situation, because Ald. King and those who acted with him—a conservative council—ignored the city solicitor who was the one legal authority who was then competent to guide it and ran things according to their own sweet wills.

Bad Stable Air Cause of Tuberculosis.
 Bad air in a stable is almost wholly responsible for the tuberculosis plague and reform in this line is one of the best cures. The modern model dairy stable, so called, is usually a model of deformity, a suffocation box, a model tuberculosis nursery.
 An ex-dairy commissioner of Ohio says he can make from $50 to $75 per cow from winter dairying easier than he can make $25 in summer. Therefore he has cows come in fresh in fall and early winter.
 Danish butter is firmer and not so easily melted as that of Holland and contiguous countries, and that makes it a greater favorite in the English market. The Danes feed largely upon oil meal.
 The richest milk is that which comes near the end of the milking. A test disclosed that the first half pint of milk at a milking contained only 1.07 per cent. of cream, while the last half pint contained 10.33 per cent. of cream.
 Many devices have been suggested for preventing cows from kicking when they are milked, but the fact is that a kicking cow usually has other views, and the surest way to cure her is to send her to the butchers. A cow that is not gentle, reliable and free from vices, should be made to give way to one that is of good disposition.
 Any kind of succulent food will assist digestion, and render all other foods beneficial. Carrots do not contain much solid matter, being mostly water, but they are highly relished by all classes of stock, and the animals will prefer them to grain, instinct prompting them to accept such foods because of their dietary effect upon the system.

GEORGE LONG DISAPPEARS.
 Is Witness in Pere Marquette Manslaughter Case.
 Windsor, Ont., Dec. 11.—George Long, the young man who was tower man for the Pere Marquette railway at Pelton, in November, 1904, when he caused the wreck of a heavy freight train, which resulted in the death of Flagman Mathews, and the severe scalding of Engineer Little, has disappeared. The Pere Marquette railway was indicted for manslaughter, and trial was to have taken place here this week, but has now been postponed until next spring as Long is a material witness for the defence.

Freight Anomaly.
 The extraordinary fact that straw plait is conveyed from Japan to London at a rate per ton nearly double that charged for carrying the same goods nearly 3,000 miles further to New York has just been discovered. Indeed, it has been found that it is actually cheaper to have plait taken to London, to New York, and have it re-exported rather than to accept direct delivery to London.

NORWAY'S PEOPLE
WELL PLEASED WITH THE NEW SOVEREIGNS.
 Norwegians Glad That King Haakon VII. is Fond of the Water—How They Are Regarded.
 Christiania, Dec. 9.—The people of Norway appear to be well-pleased with their new king and queen, King Haakon VII., and Queen Maud. One thing that pleases the Norwegians very much is that the new king is extremely fond of the water, having been given an excellent naval education, and being well qualified for the position of admiral of the Danish navy, which appointment he received with the crown. Queen Maud is just thirty-six years old. She is three years older than her husband, and is a woman of unusual mental ability. She was considered the brightest and most charming of the daughters of King Edward VII and King Alexandra of England.
 It is too early to definitely determine how this solution of the difficultly will affect the Scandinavian people. Many there are who regret that Norway found it impossible to preserve in some shape the union with Sweden, under which she had achieved such remarkable progress for nearly a hundred years. When once, however, it became manifest that arrangements which had contributed in no small degree to the maintenance of European peace for more than three generations must end, the one great anxiety of those having the interest of Europe at heart was that it should be terminated with the least possible shock to existing institutions. For the students of history and for the students of romance, perhaps the most interesting point in all of these changes is the fact that after a hundred years or more the ruling family of Denmark is apparently coming into its own again.
 In one sense of the word, everything was said and done, it must be acknowledged that the royal families of Europe have always regarded the house of Bernadotte as interlopers. It will be remembered that after the Napoleonic wars the restoration movement put every ruling family back on the throne, and fixed things up precisely as they were during the days before the French revolution. There was one exception, however. This was in the case of the house of Bernadotte, many of the Scandinavians having become attached to Napoleon's brilliant marshal, Bernadotte, during his rule in the years of the Napoleonic period.
Columbia's Royal Flag.
 One of the ranking officers of H.M. S. Drake, recently in New York, was a member of a party of British officers and American friends on a visit to Morningside Heights and Columbia University. His sharp, nautical eye noted a large flag floating from a pole in front of the university library and he ejaculated a low whistle of astonishment.
 "That's a delicate compliment to the British visitors," he confided to a fellow officer. "It's an English flag, all right, but it's handled the flag of a British ship for twenty years, and I never saw its mate."
 "Maybe it's a Yankee enterprise to surprise us with a new English flag," said the other dubiously. "Certainly, that is the royal crown of England on that bunting."
 A college professor smilingly explained.
 "That's the flag of Columbia University, although few New Yorkers know it. Still, it's an English origin, as is plainly indicated by the design—the royal crown of England in white on a green background—for our college charter was a royal grant of George II."
Labor M. P.'s Exploit.
 Though the late Mr. Parrott sat in the House of Commons in two sessions only, he managed, on one occasion, to create a mild sensation, quite unaccountably. He took his seat on a group of ex-ministers, and remained there, very unconcernedly, for the rest of the sitting. At the time, says the Manchester Guardian, this was thought to be a signal of revolution, or at least a spirited assertion of the indefeasible right of the private member to sit where he pleased. As a matter of fact Mr. Parrott took the seat because he saw no other vacant.

A Professor's Theory.
 Prof. Miller, of the University of Berlin, in the course of a lecture to the students of the Wesleyan University, Connecticut, made the curious statement that he had examined the mouths of the most beautiful women in Germany, France and England, and had found that the arrow dipped in their saliva would produce a quick and more horrible death than if it had been dipped in the venom of a snake.
Next Year's Milan Exhibition.
 The King of Italy will offer prizes at the Milan exhibition of 1905 to the extent of £1,600. Among the prizes will be one for automatic safety couplings for railways, one for the distribution of healthy and pure milk in the centres of population, one for the best type of popular dwelling adapted to the climate of Northern Italy, one for motor boats, and one for the best and most original exhibition of machinery or manufacturing process.
Peggars With Bank Books.
 It is calculated that in London alone about 4,000 persons regularly make a living by begging; that their average income per head amounts to 20s. a week, or, together, over £300,000 a year. Last year some 2,000 persons were arrested for begging in the streets of London, and many of them, says The Queen, were possessed of considerable sums of money, and even of bank books showing handsome deposits.
