The Subway Liability.

The attempt to fasten responsibility upon Ald. Mowat in connection with the Grand Trunk subway, and the false and malicious history of the deal which was sent out in the last hours of the campaign, miserably failed.

The people knew who were responsible for that iniquity, and the city is that they cannot now be punished, all of them, as was the men who tried to load their sin upon another.

The council of 1901 and 1905 spent considerable money in seeking to shake off the effects of 1903's blunder, and in vain.

It is not time that the waste of money was stopped and that the people had an idea where the city stands upon this job? Will some one move for a return of the money that has been so far spent upon it?

he has his experience. So have the people who accepted him as their leader. Everybody has learned something, and the best and most valuable of all the lesson, that no one man can "lure the tiger."

The average speculator is safer out of the market. He does not know anything about it, and even if he did he is not in the game with System.

Business Council Desired.

What the people want this year is a business council. Of this there is no assurance in the election to it of some of Kingston's most representative business men.

It is a pleasure to welcome back to it Aids. Craig, Elliott, Gaskin, Polson, Cooper, Bassam and Cooke, all of whom have served the people faithfully and well, and have clear-cut views upon what is best for the city in the conduct of its business.

Of first year men there are only two—Aids. Nickle and Millan. They will be apt enough in their understudy with some of the veterans, and in time will give a good account of themselves.

The council, as a whole, is the strongest that has taken office in many a day, and from it the best kind of civic government is expected this year.

There is a difference of opinion as to the management of the utilities. This difference has been expressed in the appeals that have been addressed to the electors.

The committee has been tried for two years. Had its policy been continuous there would have been more to say in its behalf. But the policy of 1904 was not continued in 1905. There was no desire to take the people into the committee's confidence and so secure the capital that was needed for permanent improvements.

Whether the committee or commissioners, however, take hold of the plants the people desire to know just where they stand to-day.

The statement, fuller and clearer than anything that has been yet given out, is desired and at the earliest moment.

People Are Triumphant.

The citizens' movement in the municipal elections has made itself felt. It represented the discontent of the people with the mismanagement of last year's council.

This council had not a redeeming feature. It began its reign with the power to do well if so inclined, but it blundered in the formation of its committees.

The majority of its members were so inflated with their success at the polls that they overlooked their responsibilities to the electors.

The result was apparent in the reports of the committees, so unsatisfactory generally, and subject to the amending treatment of the council.

The culmination of the council's offence lay in its all too evident and unpardonable indifference to public opinion. The lesson of the electors follows.

On great issues—those that affect the people vitally and financially—the people will not be ignored as they were in 1905.

The council of last year had a bad name and earned it. It deserved all that it received in the way of censure and condemnation. It aggravated the ratepayers so that they rose in their indignation and made a pretty clean sweep of the offenders.

The few who remain in the council and of those who showed their disdain of public opinion, are humble enough, and may be expected to remain humble for some time. They are now meditating upon the experiences of Monday, and they will gather wisdom, as a consequence.

One thing is very certain—that never again will a council commit the supreme folly of the council of 1905 and adopt Vanderbilt's motto, "The people be damned."

It is possible that some of those who went down in yesterday's battle labored under the delusion that they were on the popular side. They had opportunities, however, of realizing their error, and they closed their eyes to the facts.

The verdict of the electors written in large letters is this: "Weighed in the balance and found wanting."

FALLING HAIR STOPPED.

Baldness Cured by Destroying the Parasitic Germ That Causes It.

Baldness follows falling hair, falling hair follows dandruff, and dandruff is the result of a germ digging its way into the scalp to the root of the hair, where it saps the vitality of the hair. To destroy that germ is to prevent as well as cure dandruff, falling hair, and, lastly, baldness. There is only one preparation known to do that. Newbros' Herpicide, an entirely new, scientific discovery. Wherever it has been tried it has proven wonderfully successful. It can be either used, or because it utterly destroys the dandruff germ. Work Of The Press.

The Whig has been vindicated by the election of yesterday. It was assailed because it had presented public issues as it understood them, and it was content to leave the matter with the people.

The electors depend upon the press for illumination with regard to what their representatives in the council are doing. The people do not see the minutes, and if they did they would not see some questions as they appear when the discussions are reported.

The council of 1905 had its own method of doing things. It was not the popular method, and this fact became apparent as the papers gave the proceedings of the meetings.

The Whig had occasion, from time to time, to expose the folly of those who had the power to do right and by inclination did wrong.

This paper is widely circulated and read. Its information was gladly received. It had its effects, and they were indicated by the electors on Monday.

Moral: Let the aldermen do right and they need not fear exposure.

Scheme Of Insurance.

Frank Richards, F.I.A.S., of Victoria, B.C., is satisfied that life insurance by the stock company or private corporation can never again command the confidence of the people. It is doubtful, he says, whether the business will ever be in a satisfactory condition "until human cupidity is muzzled."

Hence he proposes that the state take hold of life insurance, insuring men and women, giving them the forfeitable policy, and even providing for a system of dowry for maidens.

Competition would be obviated under the present proposal. There would be no agencies, and no commission for agency expenses. There would not be any collectors as the premium would be collected by a special insurance stamp, issued and obtainable in every shop, office, or mining recorder's office throughout the province. This stamp would be purchased and affixed to the card by the insured and cancelled by the official in attendance with the ordinary post-office date stamp.

There would be no lapses, and no fines for non-payment of dues. At the end of a year any premiums would be recoverable like ordinary taxes.

Every doctor would be an examiner for the state, and would write the examination and policy on a card at the same time.

Best of all—and most catchy with the politician—the government of the province would be spared the inconvenience of borrowing money for public purposes, because, after the first year, there would be lots of cash from insurance and it would be available at a fixed rate of interest.

To complete the deal the payment of the premium would be effected through a slot machine. By dropping in the coin the stamp would be issued and the insurance premium would be paid at the same time.

The whole scheme is described in a light and breezy way, as if the subject were one which could be disposed of with the ease of an ordinary commercial transaction. The state may eventually go into the insurance business, but it will have something more substantial than the scheme which Mr. Richards has so airily outlined.

Mayer-Elect Nowat.

Ald. Mowat, the people's candidate, is worthy of the congratulations which he last evening received. He accepted the call to battle on very short notice, and he conducted a clean and honourable campaign.

He did not expect any consideration from the enemy, and he did not get any. On the contrary he got all the opposition he looked for, and in addition, the active hostility of an organization which has not heretofore undertaken to influence municipal elections. It was probably misled, in some way, and in its defeat has hurt the cause which it espoused.

It is to the credit of the mayor-elect that nothing, absolutely nothing, could be said truthfully against him and to his disadvantage. Conscious of his righteousness with the people generally, and of his integrity, he pursued the even tenor of his way and scored a great success.

The mayor-elect is a Kingstonian by birth and education, and a man of many gifts and endowments. He will make a capable and gentlemanly presiding officer, one to whom the council can look up with the fullest confidence. He is familiar with parliamentary practice and may be expected to direct the proceedings of the council with skill and correctness.

Lawson And His Millions.

Lawson, the picturesque, is down and out—as a force in the financial world. He must be credited with a force of character that is most unusual, with a courage and determination away above the common.

He had a fight with the System, which meant the big men who operate in the stock market, and generally control it.

A book of 300 pages would not contain the story of Mr. Lawson's experience from the time he became a financier until he essayed to break the great combine.

The idea was to demonstrate the power of the man to make a smash in the market when he felt like it. He began his hammering at Amalgamated Copper about the same time the copper market began to rise. The law of supply and demand entered its protest, and it brought his defeat. System triumphed but without any effort in its behalf.

Lawson was wealthy when he began his siege. He had ten or fifteen millions. He has lost all his money, but

Vote On The By-Laws.

There were four by-laws before the people yesterday. Two of them received the necessary number of votes to give them effect, and two of them failed in that respect.

There was a very heavy vote on the by-law which grants exemption to the locomotive works for ten years, conditional upon the expenditure by the company of a quarter of a million dollars in buildings during the next three years.

It seems to have been generally felt that this great industry should be encouraged in its policy of expansion. The improvements which are contemplated mean much for Kingston in increased labour, increased demand for houses, and increased business generally.

The necessary two-thirds' majority of the vote cast was cheerfully given, and a surplus as an earnest of good

What produced the awful shock in the election? The people's indignation. The ratepayers are patient and long-suffering, but when they rise in their might they make things move.

At a recent meeting of the conservative aldermen it was decided that Ald. King should be the candidate this year and Ald. Hoag next year. The proposal is one thing; the disposal another.
