Kingston, Jan. 5 .- (To the Editor) Having read Mr. Bridge's letter, dated December 26th, and, also Mr. Taylor's, dated December 28th, regarding sugar honey, I beg leave to say a word too. Mr. Taylor contradicts, Mr. Bridge, saying that bees will not even look at ugar syrup during the honey season. I have been in the bee business for twenty years, and have had some experience in feeding bees; and I cannot agree with Mr. Taylor. With 15gc. profit on the wax, and 94c, profit on the sugar, there would be 24cc, profit on one sec-

A little flavor could be given the adulterated honey by mixing a little pure honey with the syrup, or the And bear in mind, that you get the same linings, work, style and fit, which would have been given at the the syrup. My version of the subject is this: If sixteen pounds of sugar make one pound of wax, then one pound of sugar will make one ounce of wax. If sugar is 41c. a pound, then the ounce of wax (which is more than any sections contain, section being 4; by 1g inches) would be worth just 44c. Now two pounds of sugar and one pound of water makes three sections of honey, which would cost peund section. Cost of wax and syrup would be exactly 74c. Now then, if the section sells for 12tc., is there not a clear profit of 5c, on every Monday Morning, January 8th he would get nothing at all.
