LIVINGSTON'S

CELEBRATED HOUSE

HOME OF ARCHITECT LENOX FIGURES LARGELY.

Pretty State of Affairs Continues to Be Unearthed in Toronto Civic Inquiry—Alderman Tries to Explain Matters.

Toronto, Jan. 12.—The now celebrated home of Architect E. J. Lenox figures again to-day in the civic inquiry, when a contractor who held a contract on the new city hall, of which Mr. Lenox was architect, testified that Lenox still owed him for work done. This is the third case that has been made public. Thomas Douglas, a roofer, testified this morning that Lenox owed him $120, $74 for roofing work on the house done in 1899 or 1900. He explained that he regarded it as a contract account, because Lenox had done some work for his partner, A. Matthews, but in reply to questions by Mr. Drayton, had to admit that Matthews had not been his partner for some time, and that the account was still on his books against Lenox's name.

Alderman O. B. Sheppard went into the box to testify regarding a statement made by John Kay, the carpet merchant, that an affiant had come forward with his account, and asked, "Must I pay this?" Mr. Sheppard stated that some $90 worth of carpets had been ordered by his wife from John Kay & Co., in 1897. In 1901 he got a letter threatening action, and sent his son over to see if the account was correct, and when he found it was, paid it by cheque with interest. He had no recollection of the conversation, but it had occurred, probably, he meant had he personally to pay the bill instead of Mrs. Sheppard, who had ordered the carpets.

Although the officials of the Crown Bank have repeatedly, and emphatically, stated that Edwin St. George Banwell did not steal more than was first announced by the bank, now that the arrest has been made, they are forced to admit that Banwell got away with nearly $40,000, nearly half of which was negotiable money. The actual amount taken was: In bank notes and currency, $20,350.33; returned, $1,000; total, $19,350.33; amount received from Banwell, $38,000. The thousand dollars returned Banwell mailed to a chum in Toronto, "as a present"; and this young man handed the amount over to the police. Banwell and his wife spent $1,350 in their flight; the rest of the money is recovered. Banwell will be brought to Halifax. It is probable that a charge of theft will be laid against his wife as the bank officials believe that the woman assisted Banwell in carrying the money out of the bank.

Andrew J. Cottam, a member of the separate school board, and well known in business and athletic circles, died this morning, of heart trouble, after a short illness. He was forty-seven years of age. He was a liberal politician, a life-long member of the Toronto Rowing Club and an officer of the C.A.A.O.

A St. Paul, Minn., despatch says: A company is being organized at Waterville, Minn., by Messrs. Gustave Martz, George B. Parks, C. F. Gibbs, and others to open large farms in the Saskatchewan valley with the object of raising cattle, grain, horses, etc. It is the intention of the company to operate extensively in buying and selling Canadian lands.

John J. Thompson, for some twenty-five years connected with the passenger department of the Allan Line, died this morning. He was chief clerk and inspector of agencies of the Allan Line. Mr. Thompson was secretary of the Royal Arcanum and a member of the Masonic order.

On February 1st, John J. Beck, Fort Erie, will assume the position of superintendent of the Union Station, the retirement of William Gormally, the present superintendent, being rendered necessary through ill-health. Mr. Beck was formerly a conductor on the G. T. R., and then became night agent at the Union Station. From Toronto he went to Niagara Falls to act as agent there, and thence to Fort Erie and Black Rock, the position he at present occupies. The retiring superintendent, Mr. Gormally, will be well missed for, he has been superintendent of the Union Station since its erection.

A PEER'S DEATH.

Lord Foley Leaves No Son—Succeeded by Brother.

London, Jan. 12.—Catholic England has lost a shining support in Lord Foley, whose death occurred this week. Lord Foley was the son of the fourth baronet, his mother was a daughter of the thirteenth Duke of Norfolk. Born in 1850, he succeeded his father at the age of nineteen years. He married a daughter of Arthur Radford of Berkshire, but leaves no son, and is succeeded by his brother, the Hon. Fitzalan Foley.

The Foley family was brought into prominence about the time of the parliamentary war by a successful ironmaster. His progeny married well, served the state as soldiers and sailors, gave to the House of Commons a speaker, Thomas Foley, whose grandson was the first baron. In his heyday the family had valuable estates on the north side of Oxford street, London, and the handsome and unusual width of Portland Place was insisted upon by the Lord Foley of the day in order to preserve the view from his house of the heights of Hampstead and Highgate. The third baron took to the turf and to Crookford, his ruin himself and had to appeal to his eldest son, out of the entail of estates worth $125,000 a year, whereupon the property was sold for a million.

The late peer was a comparatively poor man. Lord Foley's mother, who died in 1877, was one of the twelve noble brigands who attended Queen Victoria at her wedding in St. James' chapel royal in February, 1840. Not one of them now survives, the late Duchess of Cleveland, mother of Lord Rosebery, being the last to die.
