Be that as it may, the election trial revelations have set the Kingston people thinking, and if they are not ready, now, to go in for absolute purity in elections, it is doubtful if they ever will. It is earnestly to be hoped, therefore, that the zeal ous fools in both parties will be restrained, and a clean election result, that a good example may be set which will undoubtedly be followed by

Trial by committees of parliament was discardfor the child, as well as becoming, and ed because the conservative members of the committee usually all voted one way, and the liberal members the other. In trial by judges there are several objections. The enormous cost of the proceeding affords a strong temp tation for "sawing off" so that the corruptions of the party is set of against the corruption of the other, and the more widespread the corruption, the less chance for investigation. The grand object of the parties is not to expose and discourage corruption but to gain or hold a seat in parliament. The proceeding is a piece of private litigation, in which the expense falls on one party or the other.
