Another Promise at Large. One looks in vain over the list of aeasures, which the local government proposes to bring down at the next ession of the legislature, for any reference to the pulpwood policy.

While in opposition the conserva tives were greatly exercised about these concessions. It was confessed that no objection had been made to the granting of two or three of concessions, but then Mr. Matheson, Mr. Whitney, and other able-bodied men kicked. They were going to know all about the pulpwood resources, and even then they were going to have a change in the plan of campaign.

Disgraceful Proceeding.

The serving of an election writ upon Hon, Mr. Fielding when he arrived Halifax to accompany the remains of his late colleague Hon, Mr. Prefontaine, to Montreal, was a disgraceful proceeding, especially as conformance with the order of the court would pre vent the minister's attendance at the funeral. It surely must have been the unanthorized act of some obtuse court official and none will regret it more

The New Model School.

The desire for a model school on a new and improved plan was not born during an election campaign. It was evolved from experiences in connection with the county model schools. These county institutes are not capable of giving the teachers the train-However, Mr. Whitney laid down his ing they require. The time is too short. That is the general conviction. The school is directed by one who acts as a public school principal part of the time, and whose service cannot be fully developed because of the change of classes.

It may be held by some that if model school teacher has to put year at the study of subjects pertaining to his profession the effect will be against the devotion of one's talent to teaching.

But the model school affords part of the education which the traveller must have anyway, and its advocates hold that it will the better equip the student for the work that lies before him Two things the pedagogue must have -(1) scholarship, and the more of i the better, and (2) skill in the methods
