Told in the Twilight

The marriage took place at seven o'clock, on Monday evening, at the Garrison chapel, Halifax, of Mr. W. A. Aitken, managing director of the Royal Securities Corporation, and Miss Gladys Drury, daughter of Lieut. Col. Drury.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Edith Drury, and the groomsmen were Mr. James A. Stairs, of New Glasgow, The ushers were Messrs. S. Arnold Finley, of Montreal, and G. W. Farrell.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dean Crawford, assisted by Rev. J. B. Murphy. Mrs. Aitken, mother of Mr. Aitken, and Mr. Travis Aitken, his brother, barrister, of Newcastle, were in Halifax, to attend the wedding.

As everyone probably knows, the dance at the Royal Military College, which was to have come off to-night, has been postponed till Monday of next week, February 5th.

Miss Annie Fowler is entertaining at a little tea this afternoon.

Miss Hazel Massie, Bagot street, gave a tea for some of her girl friends this afternoon.

The science dance is booked for Friday night, and will be a gay event in a very dull week.

In the singles for the Felix Shaw medal, Miss Nora Gordon, this morning, defeated Miss Nan Skinner, at the curling rink.

A few young people were at tea at Mrs. Roderick Carter's, a day or so ago, to meet Miss Stewart, of Belleville.

Miss Catharine Andrews has arrived from Ancaster to stay at St. James' rectory.

Miss Billy Ferris put off her trip to Cleveland till yesterday, so as to meet Mr. Joseph Fisher, at Niagara, and "do" the Falls.

Miss Nellie Hanley returned on Monday after her week's visit, in Brockville, as the guest of Mr. Mober.

Mr. Ernest Malone was in town over Sunday.

Mrs. D. S. Robertson came home from Montreal, last week, bringing her sister, Mrs. Carman, with her.

A PRIVATE VIEW

Given of Slides For Thursday's Lecture. Prof. W. Nicol kindly invited the Frontenac Historical Society to meet in his class room at Queen's, and showed them on his fine lantern the highlight views Mr. Nicol used in his story of "Historical Kingston," on Thursday evening. There are about seventy-five slides, all interesting, some picturesque, some arousing dreams and memories of their past. Awakening childish memories of buildings that have disappeared. The society is to be congratulated on the completeness of the collection. The first is the landing of the Ontario, from the painting in the room above the King Edward. La Salle follows, with illustrations of Indian and pioneer life, including maps showing why Katarakwy was such an Indian centre, and the Indian trail around here. His military life, which played such an important part in the early life, not only of the city, but of Canada, is fully represented by maps and pictures of the old forts, block houses, military headquarters, officers' quarters, etc.

All the buildings and spots where events of national interest have been enacted, are shown, also buildings of local interest, which have held of interest after the English had blotted out Frontenac, in 1794, from a drawing by Mrs. Simeon, wife of the first governor-general of Upper Canada; in 1828, by Grey. There are also slides of a few of the prominent men who have been connected with Kingston.

Throughout Thursday evening's entertainment promises to be full of interest and pleasure, and ought to awaken a great deal of enthusiasm for dear old Kingston. The Historical Society owes Prof. Nicol a debt of thanks for his kindness in giving a first view to them to-day.

METHODIST CHURCH. Service of Song and Stereopticon Entertainment. On Sunday evening crowd gathered to see "The Life of St. Paul," illustrated by life-light views, given by James Stubbs, Peterboro, and to hear him lecture upon the subject.

The pastor, Rev. B. E. Eyre, opened the service with the hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," which was followed by prayer; then Mr. Stubbs began his lecture, illustrating St. Paul's three missionary journeys, showing the greater and smaller cities through which he travelled. Several sacred songs were sung, and illustrated by views during the evening. Moving pictures were given showing the shepherd watching his flock by night, the Messiah's birth into the world, etc. The people thoroughly enjoyed the service.

On Monday night a stereopticon entertainment was given by the same gentleman, Mr. Stubbs, giving many selections on a powerful phonograph, at least half an hour before the time of the entertainment.

The entertainment was an education and the greatest of the kind of a 5,000-mile travel over land and sea. All pictures were interspersed with bell, cornet and hand solos, on the phonograph. For over two hours the audience was rapt in greatest interest, and all declared they would not miss it for anything. The proceedings closed with a portrait of his majesty King Edward VII, and "God Save the King."

CURLING MATCH. Rockwood vs. Kingston, Win by Four. The curling match, in the Dr. Clarke tankard series, played on Monday night, Rockwood vs. Kingston, resulted in a victory for the former two rinks by four points. The ice was in excellent condition, and quite a number of spectators were there to see the bonnie lads do their "sweeping."

Miss Edith Manning, of Belleville, is the guest of Mrs. G. Y. Chown. Mrs. and Miss Hawley have been down from Napanee for a few days. Miss May Smyth is expected home from Brockville on Thursday.

Miss Annie Cotter is the guest of Mrs. Creighton, of Charles street, Toronto. Miss Perley has returned to town. On her way home she stayed with Miss McKeown in Montreal.

Miss Jeanette, of Toronto, is visiting Mrs. Flett, Stuart street. Mr. Arthur Moore is in town, relieving Mr. Willis, of the Bank of Montreal, who is ill.

Miss Emily Low is expected up from Ottawa next Monday for a visit to Mr. Edward Sears, who has gone out to Vancouver and Seattle, will not go on to Dawson City till March or April.

Mrs. Keenan, Mountain street, Montreal, entertained for Miss Templeton, of Napanee. Lady Cartwright's skating party took place on Monday evening.

A WARM DISCUSSION

OVER BIBLICAL ESCHATOLOGY IN MONTREAL. Rev. Dr. Johnson Surprised at Dr. Torrey's Views - Bridge Across the Richelieu River Repaired, and Trains Are Running.

Montreal, Jan. 30.—The C.P.R. bridge across the Richelieu river at St. John's, Que., which was damaged by fire on Sunday, has been permanently repaired, and trains are now running as usual.

At this morning's session of the late-terrestrial Alumni association a paper dealing with biblical eschatology, by Rev. W. S. Lennox gave rise to considerable discussion, the general impression being that the eschatology of the Bible was to be taken as figurative and poetical, rather than literal.

In dealing with this matter, Rev. Dr. Johnson, the chairman, expressed his surprise that at the recent evangelistic meetings in Toronto, Dr. Torrey should have preached for three days in succession, on the literal hell of mediaeval times. In his opinion Dr. Torrey had done a great deal of harm by this course.

TWO SISTERS DEAD. A Double Funeral Will Take Place To-Morrow. To-morrow there will be conducted by James Reid & Co. a double funeral from the residence of the Misses McFadden, Wellington street.

Liquidation of Robinson, Turner Company. Toronto, Jan. 30.—E. C. Clarkson, as receiver, appointed by the court, has today, by order of the court, liquidated the assets of Robinson and Turner Manufacturing Company of Cheltenham, manufacturers of ladders. The liabilities show $600, wages, $1,250 salaries, $360 notes, $6,000 mortgage on property, and $3,000 mortgage on chattels, aside from any equity or the mortgages there are in assets for the creditors to realize upon.

The May Flowers Out. The Brockville Recorder, which always gets the good things, had in its issue last week, a bunch of hepaticas, better known as May flowers, which had come out to see what the weather man was doing, round the pretty town, and discovered that he was rushing the spring season.

British Surgeon's Odd Dressing. A substitution of glass for lint in dressing certain kinds of wounds is the curious suggestion made by Dr. J. L. A. Aymard, M. R. C. S., in The Lancet. Dr. Aymard describes an experiment with the new dressing which he himself undertook at Johannesburg hospital.

Walking to Cure Malaria. Obsolete cases of malaria that have withstood ocean voyages, mountain heights and quinine dosages are said to have been conquered by systematic and continued walking. What the medical patient wants most to do is to sit in a chair, nurse his aches and pains or to lie down and doze. Advocates of the walking cure maintain that fresh air is an antidote not only to the malaria, but of the blues, which usually accompany it.

KNOW IVORY'S VALUE.

African Natives' Increased Knowledge Enhances its Price. It is a curious fact that notwithstanding the marked advance in the price of ivory in recent years the volume of sales has not diminished, but has actually increased.

The causes which have led to this advance in price are interesting. It is not due to any artificial manipulation of the market in the great centres, nor is it due to increased demand or scarcity of elephants. For the cause the inquirer must look to the heart of Africa, where a spirit of genuine commercialism is manifesting itself among the natives.

Their wealth is in ivory, and they have learned to value it as such. Indeed, the wealth of leading men among the natives was once commonly counted in tusks. They would say of a dusky capitalist of this kind that he was worth so many tusks, just as one in this country would say that a man is worth so many dollars.

Of course that was a natural phase in the development of a primitive people. The red man estimated his riches in wampum and the Laplander in furs. They often would part with their possessions for a few beads or trinkets. They did not know the value of a dollar. Certainly it can no longer be said of the natives of Africa that they do not know the value of money. They have learned. Thus it comes that the "beaten in his blindness" is not so blind as has been asserted.

Increased transportation facilities and telegraphic communication have brought Africa into closer touch with the rest of the world. It is said that a native may be working 1,000 miles in the interior, and yet he can quote you the cash value of tusks in the Antwerp or London market.

Lonely London Bachelors. The somewhat lonely life led by Admiral Sir Arthur Cochrane, K. C. B., whose sudden death at Charles Street, St. James', was the subject of a coroner's inquest recently drawn attention to many such solitary existences, says The London Mail.

The district contained within the limits of the Haymarket, Piccadilly, Pall Mall, and St. James Street, is practically monopolized by houses let out in rooms to retired naval and military men and civil servants, all bachelors, who have settled down to spend the evening of their lives within the four walls of their respective clubs. They sleep in the lodging houses which practically usurp the quadrilateral of the Janitor's room, and breakfast, fasts there, perhaps, and that is all. The rest of their time they spend in their clubs.

It must not be supposed that these rooms are especially cheap. None are to be had under twenty-five shillings a week; the average price is thirty shillings. For that one obtains a plainly furnished bedroom at the top of the house scrupulously clean but without undue adornment. The attendance is included. It is usually good, provided the tenant cases matters by occasional "pops" to the valet, who keeps his wardrobe in order and brings him his bath in the morning. Lights are also included, and at night the transfer of power who returns to the hotel at 11 o'clock will see in serried rows the candlesticks of the habitués awaiting their return from the clubs.

In the halls of many of these houses alone one may see packed away in a corner dusty piles of hat boxes - the property of young officers scattered all over the globe in quarters where silk hats are not de rigueur.

"These lodging houses," said the secretary of a large West End club, "serve a useful purpose, but they are not places to be ill in. The rules of these clubs make it impossible for members who practically live in them to take a bedroom permanently in the club buildings, and these lodging houses supply the want.

"For my part, I could not tolerate the loneliness. But you will find old gentlemen so wedded to their clubs that they think nothing of leaving their beds in their lodgings. They will stay up through the long vacation, though they have plenty of invitations into the country, rather than leave their clubs."
