poverty, neglect and dramatic uch as greeted Miss Abbott's first appearance in grand opera, was the great event, not only of her own life, but as an object lesson, and an incen-tive to labor for something great and noble, was worth millions of dollars to the thousands of young women in our land, who long for the hour when they can reach the goal of their ambition but who, wearied before the winning post is reached, sink hopeless and helpless, while still half way from the prize they hope to gain.

Miss Abbott's first appearance as a prima donna was a pronounced success from the start. The easy gaze with which she met her vast audience and received the plaudits which shook the vast building, told the story of a perfect schooling. Nothing had been left to chance, and the result was such a triumph as had not been equalled by any debutante, native or foreign, for many years. But this great success was not sufficient for this young American singer. She returned to her native land and sang in the greatest opera house in the world, had never been equalled in Europe. It was in the duet with the tenor that she achieved her greatest triumph;

on the American continent. The debut of Miss Bessie Abbott which took place this week, is worthy of something more than a mere passing mention, for Miss Abbott's wonderful success is an object lesson t the thousand of young American girls who are looking to the theatre and grand opera as the easiest pathway to riches and distinction. To all such aspirants let me say, that highway that led Miss Abbott to fame and wealth, was not a royal road It is true that her childhood was passed in musical and artistic surround ings; her mother was a remarkably talented woman; she wrote well in prose and poetry; she was also an accomplished musician, and she painted admirably in portraiture and land scape; these were very great advantright side of a man who carries his have gained Miss Abbott her proud position if it was not for the hardest and most unresting work. Prompted by the ambition to do something that would raise her above the ordinary chances of fate, she settled down the severest study that never tired YOUR BRAIN HOLDS that never faltered, but toiled on with a persistence that nothing but death defeat; when the mother her two little girls were deprived of THE NERVE STRINGS their natural protectors, the hard AND IF DISEASE TAKES HOLD OF THE NERVES THE BRAIN LOSES opportunity for any employment, so AND MENTAL AND PHYSICAL COLLAPSE ARE AS CERTAIN AS SUNSET their lot in New York, Miss Abbott's life for years was one long struggle to exist, but never for a moment did she lose sight of the goal, which, some day, she hoped to reach. Fashionable circles were stirred last week by an important item of news from abroad. The Countess Castellane, nee Gould, has applied to the French courts for a separation from her husband and the guardianship of her children. While the ending of this marriage is unfortunate, it was only what might have been expected from the count's well-known dissipated character. At the time of his marriage, his debts amounted to several millions of dollars, which, in the marriage settlement, it was said. George Gould agreed to pay. It was a costly price for a damaged title. The countess' fortune amounted to $600,000 a year, and $400,000 of this was annually squandered by her husband. We have paid a costly price for foreign titles and it is time for our wealthy American girls to call a halt. BROADBRIM.
