

Undigested Food

When any portion of food remains in the stomach and refuses to digest, it causes the torments of indigestion. This undigested food rapidly ferments, irritating the sensitive coating of the stomach, while other parts of the body, particularly the head, suffer in consequence.

So long as this undigested food remains in the stomach, the discomfort continues. A few doses of stop all fermentation, sweeten the contents of the stomach and give natural assistance that relieves the stomach of its burden. The use of Beecham's Pills gradually strengthens the stomach nerves and soon restores them to a normal, healthy condition.

Beecham's Pills positively cure all stomach troubles, while their beneficial effects on the liver and kidneys greatly improve the general health.

Beecham's Pills have been used and recommended by the general public for over fifty years.

Prepared only by the Proprietor, Thomas Beecham, St. Helens, Lancashire, Eng.

Miss Annie Tobin, Madoc, Ont., writes: "I take great pleasure in recommending your Burdock Blood Bitters to any one who may be troubled with pimples on the face. I paid out money to doctors, but could not get cured, and was almost discouraged, and I thought I would give B.B.B. a trial, so got two bottles, and before I had taken them I was completely cured and had no sign of pimples again."

WHAT IS TO BE?

Strike Or A Settlement Of Troubles.

WHAT ARE DEMANDS

BOTH SIDES MAKING READY FOR TROUBLE.

The Great Stumbling Block is That Requiring a Recognition of the Union—Some of the Miners Oppose the Striking Movement.

New York, Feb. 15.—The all-absorbing question whether there will be peace or war between the anthracite coal operators and the mine workers after April 1st of this year, when the agreement signed two years ago, will expire, is to be decided at a meeting here, this afternoon, between President Hoot and other representatives of the anthracite mine interests and a special committee of the mine workers, headed by President John Mitchell, of the United Mine Workers of America. Everything hinges upon the demands which the miners will make, and would have been recognized by both sides have been recognized for every emergency and are fully determined not to recede from their respective positions.

The position of the mine operators is well-known. They are practically willing to concede every reasonable demand outright, or submit it to arbitration, but they are determined not to recognize the union of the Mine Workers as a body. If the conference held to-day, does not result in an amicable settlement of all differences between mine operators and workers, it will be because the representatives of the miners, headed by John Mitchell, insist upon the recognition of their union.

As the situation stands, the refusal of the mine operators to accept the demands of the mine workers would necessarily lead to a strike, which would involve more than 100,000 men and would cause no end of trouble and inconvenience to the mine owners, the coal railroads and to the public in general. There is a strong faction among the mine workers, which is decidedly opposed to a strike and would be willing to withdraw the demand for the recognition of the union rather than have a strike. It is understood, however, that John Mitchell, backed up by his supporters, will insist upon recognition, hoping that the operators will rather give in than face a general strike.

The general opinion, however, is that the operators will not give in.

For many months both sides have been preparing themselves for the possibility of a strike. The mine workers have greatly strengthened their union by gathering in a large number of new members and have saved up a reserve fund of several million dollars, which would enable them to continue the strike for about three months without additional help. The mine operators have accumulated large reserve stores of coal, variously estimated in the aggregate at 13,000,000 tons. They expect to increase this amount to nearly thirty million tons before April 1st. In addition, it is stated, they have in readiness some seventy-five thousand non-union mine workers, distributed through the anthracite region, have built stockpiles and houses for the strike breakers and have made arrangements for the thorough policing of the districts to protect them against lawlessness on part of the strikers.

Although nothing positive in regard to the demands of the miners will be known until the recognition of the union by the representatives of the mine operators, it is understood by those well informed, that the miners will make the following demands: a general strike, a large company hands, standard for weighing coal at the breaker, and definite and as far as possible, uniform scale for deal work.

The mine operators are by no means hopeful in regard to the future. They are strongly inclined to believe that the miners are anxious to bring the question of recognizing the union to an issue and that, by his advice, they will insist upon that demand, even at the cost of a strike. They are determined to remain firm in their position and several of the most prominent mine operators have expressed the belief, that it would probably be necessary again for President Roosevelt to act as mediator, to prevent a strike, which would be of incalculable magnitude.

Among the mine workers there is a large faction which is opposed to a strike. Even among their leaders are many who are not in sympathy with what would necessarily precipitate a strike. They are of the opinion that the mine owners are too well prepared for the eventuality of a strike, that the strikers would surely be defeated. They also feel that the defeat of the strikers would almost with certainty cause the disruption of the Mine Workers' Union, and would destroy their former success. They still hope that John Mitchell will not go to extremes in his demands and believe that he is fully aware of the agreement that the conference, to-day, would be the signal for widespread dissensions in the ranks of the miners, that would probably lead to a fatal split in the union. The advocates of moderation are gaining in strength every day, and they are awaiting the news from the front with considerable anxiety.

FASHION'S NOTES.

A Smart Separate Coat For Spring.

In spite of the general use of the two and three piece suits, the separate coat, somewhat severely tailored, is affected by many smart dressers. It is used as a spring wrap with the shirt-waist suit of tulle or silk or heretofore it is usually fashioned of some one or other of the waterproof cloths. The clever cut of the little coat illustrated has made it do with its popularity. The effective strap reaches to the little breast pockets on either side and curves down to form a hip piece. Pocket flaps are arranged on this hip piece also. The edges of the coat are bound with a silk braid, a revival of an old fashion that adds an air of distinction to the garment.

MOTHER AND CHILD.

Let the mother take Scott's Emulsion for the two; it never fails to benefit them both. One can eat for two, but nourishing two is a different thing. It calls for a degree of internal strength that the average woman lacks. People of luxury are not very strong by habit; overworked people are weak in some functions from exhaustion or their surroundings. Scott's Emulsion can be depended upon to overcome such conditions. It is a wonderful food for a mother and child.
