much attack in the legislature and on is becoming too prevalent. The pristhe political platform as the numbered ballot. The conservative party spent days and even nights in challenging it, as subversive of the voice of a free electorate. The first measure of the new government was an amendment of the law, its introduction being heralded with applause, as the beginning of a new era of untrammelled expression. In the first clection held under the new regime it was, therefore, a surprise to find that the numbered ballot still remained, and that while the attorney-general and his fellow ministers told the people that at last they had the privilege of a secret vote, the workers upon the conservative side were declaring that the ballot was still a numbered one, and that it would be known how any person voted, if so desired. There was ground for the warning, since the ballots are numbered in regular order, and so is the poll book as voters present themselves. If it was possible under the late government to detect a voter's choice, it is still easier under the new act. The ballots given to a poll are usually numbered from Ol, and the poll book starts with the corresponding number. It is possible, therefore, for a returning pedition, which will start early in the member a number under 200, than one

Yesterday we told you that the first viewing of the daintiest, most becoming and all together delightful of new season's hats would be ready at this store to-day.

As we write this the millinery is receiving the praise that it deserves-our aisles are crowded and on every side are heard expressions of enthusiastic approval.

Let us give you a wee bit of a suggestion-If you did not visit the hats to-day, try to do so tomorrow, because—there are certain hats here which will suit you better than others-Hats that possess a bit of line and contour that will make them especially becoming to you-Hats that are priced to be sold for the exact sum you wish to spend (and very likely for less sums than you have expected to spend.)

You don't want anyone else to get first pick of them-Do you? So you see that it is really
