To add this sum to the capital account, without any sinking fund to meet depreciation, cannot be considered, and Leeds, in humiliation and despair, is appealing to the council to pay back to the lighting department the total of the sums it has contributed towards the general rates. The manager of the plant declares that a grave mistake has been made in handing over surplus carnings unmindful of the pace at which progress was made, and and he is good enough authority. which requires that large reserves
