

SUNLIGHT SOAP

Clothes washed by Sunlight Soap are cleaner and whiter than if washed in any other way.

Chemicals in soap may remove the dirt but always injure the fabric. Sunlight Soap will not injure the most delicate lace or the hands that use it, because it is absolutely pure and contains no injurious chemicals.

Sunlight Soap should always be used as directed. No boiling or hard rubbing is necessary. Sunlight Soap is better than other soap, but is best when used in the Sunlight way.

5c. Buy it and follow directions. 5c.

$5,000 REWARD will be paid to any person who will discover that Sunlight Soap contains any injurious chemicals or any form of adulteration.

CUTICURA REMEDIES WORK WONDERS

"As I was a sufferer with eczema I write to tell you what a great friend I found in Cuticura Remedies. In six months I had tried three doctors, but did not get any better. I was so miserable and my face was so disfigured that I could hardly put a pin in me without weeping. I was told by a friend that I should try Cuticura. I bought a box and used it as directed. The first day my face was covered, my eyebrows came out, and then it got in my eye. I then went to another doctor. He asked me what I was taking for it. I told him I was using Cuticura. He said that was a very good thing, but that he thought that my face would be marked for life. But Cuticura did its work, and my face is now just as clear as it ever was.

"My brother-in-law told me about the wonderful Cuticura remedies. I took his advice and got the Ointment, Soap, and Resolvent. I washed with the Cuticura Soap and then applied the Ointment, and took Cuticura Resolvent as directed. In a short time my face began to get better, and I had taken one bottle of Resolvent I could crush the scales off my face like a powder. When I had taken four bottles my face was as clear as ever.

I told all my friends about my remarkable cure. I feel so thankful I want everybody far and wide to know what Cuticura can do. It is a sure cure for eczema. (signed) Mrs. Emma White, 611 Cherrier Place, Camden, N. J., April 25, 1905.

BRITISH LABOR PARTY DIVIDED INTO FOUR SECTIONS IN THE NEW PARLIAMENT.

Most important is the Labor Representation Committee Section, Which Numbers 29 Members—Form an Exclusive Party in the House and Will Decide Upon its Own Policy—A Trades Union Program.

The Labor party in the new British Parliament is divided into four sections: (1) The Labor representation committee members, who meet at the House of Commons; (2) The miners' members; (3) The Liberal-Labor members; and (4) a section which must be classed as Labor Independents, says the London Express.

The most important of these four is the Labor representation committee section, which will be known officially as the "Labor party." It numbers 29 members, which is practically a majority of the whole Labor party. Out of 49 candidates the following have been returned: Messrs. J. Keir Hardie, W. Crooks, D. J. Shackleton, and A. Henderson (members of the last Parliament); Mr. C. W. Ross; Mr. R. Clynes; G. Duncan; A. H. Gill; T. Glover; J. Hodge; W. Hudson; J. Jenkins; F. W. Jowett; G. D. Kelly; J. R. Macdonald; J. T. Macpherson; J. O'Grady; J. Parker; T. F. Richards; G. H. Roberts; J. Seddon; P. Snowden; T. Summerbell; W. Thorne; S. Walsh; G. J. Wardle; A. Wikie and W. T. Wilson.

These members are pledged by the constitution of the Labor representation committee to form an exclusive party in the House; it will now elect its own members and whips, and decide its own policy. Probably it may on occasions open its doors to those members whose policy most nearly coincides with its own, and thus strengthen its action by increasing the unity of the party. What its exact program will be is still doubtful; the meetings shortly to be held will decide that. But these members who are trade unionists and whose candidature has been endorsed by the Parliamentary committee of the trades union congress, have certainly a well-defined basis to work upon.

Trade Union Program.

To a great extent this trade union program will form the policy of the party, as it includes all the vital interests for which Labor has been clamoring, though probably some extensions of it will have to be made to meet the needs of the strong Socialist element and the leaders of the group.

To the trade unionist section of the Labor representation committee the trades disputes bill and the workmen's compensation act amendment are all in his mind, and much more than the positions which are made the chief planks in other party programs.

No doubt the coming conference will see an amalgamation of programs; the Labor representation committee, the Independent Labor party, and trade union congress declarations will all be thrown into the melting pot, and thenceforth will come something which will suit all parties.

Both the Labor representation committee and trade union congress are in agreement—as naturally befits a child and its parent—and the list of measures as given by the Parliamentary committee of the latter include the two mentioned above, amendments to the track act, the factory acts, unemployment, and the Education Act, the labor, extension of the housing of the working classes act, adult suffrage, an eight-hour working day, and reform of some municipal laws.

Miners and Members.

Such is the policy of the largest category; for, while they are strongly trade unionist, there are among them many who could safely sit on the Liberal benches and not lose political caste. Inasmuch as they have at the trade union congress supported many of the resolutions brought forward, it is pretty evident that their unionism is not their first and their Liberalism last.

The miners' members are Messrs. W. Abraham, T. Burt, C. Fenwick, F. Hall, J. Johnson, T. Richards, W. Wilson, W. Bruce, E. Edwards, J. Haslam, J. Johnson, J. Williams and J. Wadsworth, thirteen in all, forming a very strong representation of one particular interest.

In the manifesto issued by the executive committee before the election the order that the Eight Hours Bill and all other measures which might be carried through the House, so that this portion of the Labor party must have support for their particular measures. They can work harmoniously with the newly-christened Labor party. There is little doubt but that things will be arranged smoothly; indeed, the federation has announced that their candidates were in full "accord with the aspirations and needs of the laboring classes generally," and would "co-operate heartily with other Labor representatives."

The Lib-Labs.

Lastly are four Labor Independents; Messrs. R. Bell (re-elected), W. C. Steadman, J. Ward, and J. H. Wilson. These have not chosen to sign the constitution of the Labor representation committee, and thus nominally outside its pale. But they agree with the policy promulgated by the trades union.

Our Yanks Cousin Abroad.

Grace George, recently returned from England, tells of a great love to her patriotic pride. She was invited to a dinner by Lady —, at a magnificent mansion in Kensington, and was treated to a dinner to some other guests by a celebrated vocalist. On the veranda afterwards the hostess brought two young debutantes up to the well-to-do, and they were engaged in a conversation. "I'm sure you will like each other, for you are Americans, too, Miss George," said the titled lady, as if that settled the question of the mutual esteem of the actress and the debutante. Miss George, wishing to be cordial, greeted them pleasantly and remarked, with the intention that the hostess, as well as the girls, should hear her: "Did you not enjoy the beautiful singing in the dining hall? And the acoustics were perfect, were they not?" "Yes," said one of the fellow Americans, with enthusiasm, "those acoustics were the best I ever ate."

Not To Be Scared.

In an old-fashioned churchyard in Scotland a pile of skulls and bones had been turned up in the process of grave-digging.

The plowmen in a bony near of offered the "loon" five shillings to go at night and remove one. The lad agreed and started in the dark.

An ambush had been laid to frighten him. As he lifted one skull a howl voice called:

"'A' richt," said the lad, laying the ghastly thing down to lift another. Again came from the darkness a voice: "That's mine!"

"'Gae awa' ye baverla! tiddo! T' canna hae twa skulls,'"—Pearson's Weekly.

HINDU ADEPT MARVELS

MANGO TREE GROWS FIFTY FEET WHILE YOU WAIT.

Visitor From the Occident Who Actually Climbed Up Into One of the "Wizard" Trees—Sat at the Feet of Coomra Sami, the Philosopher of Srirangam—The Wonderful Rope Trick.

The writer has spent six months in Kashmir at the feet of Coomra Sami, the philosopher of Srirangam, one of the greatest of the thousands of adepts who are to be found all over the wilds of India. Some of the adepts are the jogis, but the higher brotherhoods of Sadhu and Sanayasi, who seldom exhibit their powers and never for reward. Dr. Hensoldt says in The Occult Review.

These marvellous illusions have been the wonder of centuries. If I could produce anything like them and go up and down the country exhibiting them to the spectators, I dare say, thirty or forty years ago, I should have been a millionaire. I never forget the day and the state of my feelings when I saw the state of the trees in the first time. This was a large public square at Srirangam, in the presence of about 400 people, forming a circle of perhaps sixty yards in diameter. In the centre stood the "Sadhu." Some of the adepts were of course, much nearer to him than he seemed, and he seemed to have no objection if people came within ten or fifteen yards of him, but the average distance kept by the spectators was, I dare say, thirty yards. Most of my readers will know what a mango is. For the benefit of the few who may not I will say that it is an edible tropical fruit, about the size of a large pear, growing on a tree which reaches a height of from forty to a hundred feet.

Not a Cheap Western Trick.

The "Sadhu" dug a hole in the ground—about six inches deep, placed the mango in it and covered it with earth. I was expected to see a modification of a well-known trick practiced by some of your western conjurers. The mango was placed in a hole, and the mango was placed in a hole, and the mango was placed in a hole.

Where is That Adept Now?

A "Sadhu" after having addressed a large assemblage of people, and preached one of the most impressive sermons I ever listened to, took a rope about fifteen feet long and perhaps an inch thick. One end of this rope he held in his left hand, while with his right he threw the other end up in the air. The rope, instead of coming down again, remained suspended, even after the adept had removed his other hand, and it seemed to have become as rigid as a pillar.

Glves and Miracles.

It was noticed in Paris when King Edward was there that he always appeared in public with his right hand gloved, but not his left. As it is a common practice to carry the right glove loose and not the left, much speculation has been excited by the King's reversal of this custom. One learned writer suggests that it is due to a kind of perception of hydraulic propriety. The object of a glove, he says, is not to adorn but to protect the hand. Which hand has the more constant employment and is therefore sought into closer contact with microbes? Why, the right hand. It follows that in keeping that hand gloved the King shows his unflinching sense.

Irish Fuel Supply.

Experts claim that Irish bogs are capable of turning out 50,000,000 tons of fuel per year for a thousand years, and if this were sold at the moderate figure of 5s. per ton it would bring in £12,500,000 a year. When this sum is multiplied by a thousand it will be seen that Ireland is richer in undeveloped resources than is sometimes imagined. It is claimed for the new fuel that it is practically smokeless, that it has no clinker or sinder, deteriorates but little by keeping, does not crumble by handling, and has high calorific power.

Only Half the Brain Work.

Prof. Byrnes Thompson lectured the other evening before the Graham College, London, on "The Nervous System." In every man's brain there are many cells waiting to be developed, held, and as a matter of fact the normal person uses only half of the brain, the other half being kept in reserve.

FROM NEWSBOY TO M.P.

W. C. Steadman Tells of His Early Struggle With Poverty.

W. C. Steadman, Labor M. P. for Central Finsbury, relates the story of his life in a special article in the current number of Pearson's Weekly.

"At the age of eight I got my first job as an errand boy," says Steadman. "The thing I like since has given me such pleasure as I felt when I took home my first week's earnings to my mother. I remember as such a thin, amiable-looking child that when I applied for the job they at first scoffed at the idea of my being strong enough to run errands, and had through my boyhood suffered from ill-health. I do not think this last experience did me any harm. On the contrary, it widened my mental horizon and gave me an interest in the welfare of the neighbors which I heard the customers discuss.

"My barman job, however, did not last long, for my mother, at God be thanked, was such a thrifty, hard-working woman that she had a wonderful piece of self-sacrifice, for it meant that my earnings ceased.

"Large building changed me from a weak, puny lad into a strong man, and now I do not think I can tell you anything else about my boyhood.

"The general election of 1885, when I was 17 years old, first gave me an interest in politics. I heard the name of Newton, the founder of what is now the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, who was residing at Tower Hamlets, and who had been the radical candidate, and thenceforward I threw myself heart and soul into his cause, and worked for the principles he advocated.

"The first thing I did was to try to write for which Labor has been clamoring, though probably some extensions of it will have to be made to meet the needs of the strong Socialist element and the leaders of the group.

To the trade unionist section of the Labor representation committee the trades disputes bill and the workmen's compensation act amendment are all in his mind, and much more than the positions which are made the chief planks in other party programs.

How Good Food may turn to Poison

DECAY is not digestion, you know, even when it takes place in the stomach. Food decayed in the body after being eaten is as dangerous to health as food decayed before being eaten. Food nourishes or poisons, just according to how long it remains in the Bowels undigested.

Cascarets are the simplest and surest safeguard against Delayed Digestion yet discovered.

Sold in a thin Enamel Box, half as thick as your watch, which fits into the vest pocket or lady's purse as if it grew there.

In this round-edged Enamel box are found six small Candy Tablets.

One of these toothsome tablets works wonders for digestion.

Soon as placed in the mouth it starts the Saliva flowing, which at once gets to work dissolving it.

The Saliva becomes blended with the Candy Cascarets, and from the moment they start going down your throat together they start working together.

Now, what do they work? Bowel-work, of course.—Digestion.

Some folks think Digestion takes place in the Stomach only.

But that's a great mistake! Most of the Digestion occurs in the thirty feet of Intestines that connect with the Stomach.

Now, these Intestines are 30 feet long, for a purpose.

They are lined with a set of little mouths, that squeeze Digestive Juices into the Food eaten.

The Digestive Juices thus mix with the food, just as Saliva mixes with Candy casarets, dissolving and changing that food into nourishment, as it passes along the channel.

The Intestines are also lined with millions of little suction pumps, that draw the Nutrient from the Food, as it passes them in going through.

This Nutrient is then carried into the Blood, and spread over the Body as Brain, Bone and Brain.

But, when the Bowel-Muscles are weak, the Food moves too slowly to stimulate the little Gastro Mouths and there is no flow, or too little flow of Digestive Juices, to change the food into nourishment.

Then, the food decays in the Bowels, and in the thirty feet of Intestines.

When this Decay begins the little suction pumps draw Poison from the decayed Food, into the blood, instead of the Nutrient it should have drawn.

Now, Cascarets contain the only combination of drugs that Stimulates these Muscles of the Bowels and Intestines just as a Cold Bath, or open-air Exercises, stimulates a Lazy Man.

Cascarets therefore act like Exercises. They produce the same sort of Natural result that a Six Mile walk in the country would produce, without any injurious Chemical effect.

The Vest Pocket Cascarets Box is sold by all Druggists, at Ten Cents.

Be sure you get the genuine, made only by the Sterling Remedy Company, and never sold in bulk. Every tablet stamped "COC.".

A sample and the famous booklet "Curse of Constipation," Free for the asking. Address Sterling Remedy Company, Chicago or New York.
