A WARM SUBJECT

There's nothing in the world we're so much interested in as Coal at this time of the year. It may sound queer to speak of coal being a subject of science, but that's what we've made it. Two important discoveries we have made are that complete satisfaction to our customers is the key, and that the way to win business is to deserve it.

Justice Rules

At our coal yards, and every customer may rest assured of obtaining his money's worth, whether he buys a ton or a cartload. It isn't merely a matter of full weight—quality of coal counts as well. But we claim to give full weight of high grade coal, and our list of patrons contains the names of many who will back our assertions.

After The Land Grasters. The settlement of lands in the North-West is the great question, the one involving the most serious consideration. From information given out in Ottawa it seems that the government has had its own difficulties in order to prevent frauds. The Homestead Act has not been as definite in its provisions as the later experience has suggested, and the interior department is doing all it can in order to protect the honest settlers.

The land sharks have been busy with both the railway companies and the government, and, under all sorts of guises and deceptions, have been eager to get control of the lands for which there is now an active demand. Two things in the public interest have been ascertained, (1) the railway companies have been compelled to patent all the lands to which they were entitled under the terms of their charters, and (2) homesteading by proxy has been stopped. In addition the border districts, on the international line, which has been the object of special attention by Yankee speculators, are being especially examined, and wherever there has been no improvement of the land, as required by the law, the entry will be cancelled.

The upshot of all this will be the driving out of those who have been seeking titles without earning them, thus to profit by the immigration. The government will be applauded in all this. Its action is very wise and proper.

The Taxation of Wealth.

Addressing an audience in Washington, on Saturday, when he laid the cornerstone of the new congressional offices, Mr. Roosevelt said: "I feel that we shall ultimately have to consider the adoption of some scheme as that of a progressive tax on all fortunes beyond a certain amount, either given in life or devised or bequeathed upon death to any individual—a tax so framed as to put it out of the power of the owner of one of these enormous fortunes to hand on more than a certain amount to any one individual; the tax, of course, to be imposed by the national, and not the state government. Such a taxation should, of course, be aimed merely at the inheritance or transmission in their entirety of those fortunes swollen beyond all healthy limits."

Mr. Roosevelt sees, as so many others do, the danger of concentrating the wealth of the country. A half century ago the number of rich men in America was small. Now the number is conspicuous, not so much because the circle has widened, but because the millions and billions are passing more and more into its control.

The few have their hands on the commerce, industry, food, and fuel, and upon them the very lives of the people, the labouring classes, in a measure, depend. And these, as they pass away, are leaving their plans arranged so that they go on, in their grinding processes, in their accumulation of wealth, in their combinations, their trusts and monopolies. Mr. Roosevelt has a theory that the nation may be able to do something to restrain this tendency. How can it be done? He proposes a tax. Is it practical? It does not seem to be, but it will be looked at and considered by the press and people, and perhaps there may crop up the theories that reduced to writing and crystallized into law may have the effect at which Mr. Roosevelt aims.

Gorky and His Fall.

Maxime Gorky has imperilled his popularity at the very outset of his American tour. The definite object of his coming to the United States has not been stated, but he seems to have had a personal aim as well as patriotic mission. He has been against the Russian government, as all socialists are, but he has not criticized it, like Tolstoy, who, whatever his emotions and views on passing events, expresses himself in a grave and reverent fashion.

Gorky is of a more excitable temperament, and his language is not always wisely chosen. Hence he has suffered imprisonment, and its humiliations, as better men have done, but he would not have suffered at all had he been reasonably prudent in his speech. The irrational spirit which possesses him was manifested on his arrival in New York, by fiery attacks on the Russian government, and later by telegraphic expressions of sympathy with the men under arrest in Idaho for the murder of its ex-governor.

But the climax in the events of a day came when he was accused of travelling with an actress and calling her his wife, while Mme. Gorky and her children were in Russia. Following his imprisonment he seems to have left his wife and resided with an actress in Finland. Whether he was divorced from his wife is not clear. He is separated from her at any rate, and he refers to the women who accompany him to America as "my wife."

The literary people who hovered around Gorky, on his coming to America, are non-plussed and silent. Howells and Mark Twaine were on his committee. They do not relish the position in which they find themselves. Twaine says the political and social conditions of Russia are more or less interwoven (mixed would be the better word), but in America "the domestic relations are held in a different light."

It is a good thing they are, and it is well that public opinion should so sharply disapprove of literary or public men, or patriots, seeking honors and favours under very questionable circumstances. Gorky may as well go back to Russia at once. His mission to America, under the circumstances, cannot be a success.

A REMEDY IN SIGHT FOR THE ABSOLUTE CURE OF CANCER.

Experiment Being Made at Buffalo—Existence of Immune Forces Antagonistic to Cancer. Albany, N.Y., April 16.—As a result of experiments which are now being made in the cancer laboratory, at Buffalo, the medical experts of that institution are encouraged in the belief that a specific cure for cancer will soon be discovered. In his annual report to the state commissioner of health, Dr. Harvey K. Gaylord, director of the laboratory, says the experiments indicate the existence of immune forces antagonistic to cancer, and adds:

"However deep the skepticism may be regarding the spontaneous cure of human carcinoma, and this skepticism is certainly widespread, there is absolutely no doubt of the occurrence of spontaneous cure in mice with cancer. It is shown that clearly defined cases having been made, our observation during the year."

Up to January 1st the laboratory had employed 3,500 mice for experimental purposes. Of these 2,500 received injections of the materials derived from the Jensen tumor and 1,000 fatal tumors were developed. Healthy mice have been placed in the same cage with those which were inoculated, and there is reason to believe that some of the healthy animals have become infected. It is shown that spontaneous recovery diminishes with increasing age and dimensions of the tumors, and there is also evidence that the chance of recovery is greater when the growth of the tumor is lower.

Spontaneous cure occurred in about twenty-three per cent. of the inoculated animals. The frequency of the cure, Dr. Gaylord says, suggests that it may be more frequent in human beings than is generally supposed.

The occurrence of spontaneous recoveries from cancer, indicating the existence of immune forces capable of terminating the disease, demonstrate that cancer is not necessarily incurable," the report continues, "and should serve as an additional stimulus to research directed toward the discovery of a serum therapeutic treatment."

Accompanying the report is a statement made by Dr. H. G. Matzinger, who has visited several localities of this state where, it is said, an unusually large number of cases of cancer have been discovered. One physician called on by Dr. Matzinger had treated 300 cases in twenty years. In his opinion there is no doubt that the number of cases of cancer is increasing. Dr. Matzinger describes the physical conditions of the country where cases have been prevalent. He finds that in each locality there is considerable dampness, and states conditions which indicate that there is some connection with the occurrence of the disease.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The country teachers do not care how soon the proposed law is passed and their salaries increased.

The local government offers to give $50 in cash in lieu of a grant of land to each Fenian Raid veteran. Amazing generosity! Will it be accepted? Let the veterans answer.

Hamilton is becoming reconciled to the loss of the normal college. It is being promised a technical school, but there is no reference to it in the education bill. How is that?

The local house is booked to adjourn in May, and nothing will be allowed to interfere with its sessions meanwhile. Not even the visit of Prince Arthur to Toronto.

The Toronto Telegram delights its readers with the prediction that ere long, and from the Gillies limit, the provincial treasurer will be declaring a dividend of $5 per capita of the entire population of Ontario.

Euclid Avenue Baptist church, Cleveland, (Rockefeller's), has opened rooms in which the young people can spend their evenings socially and enjoyably. These rooms are called "sparking parlours," by the uninitiated.

Will the Bannerman government retreat from the position it has taken on the education question? It cannot afford to do so. It was elected largely by the dissenting voters, and those demand the repeal of the Balfour education act.

Only a government with a big majority, such as Mr. Whitney's, could afford to do heroic things. Just now the premier does not care about a little dissatisfaction. That glorious condition is not likely to be long-lived.

The Catholic Register is not taking kindly to the new university act. It makes no financial provision for St. Michael's College. The remedy? It will not be had until the friends of St. Michael's are united and know how to take care of their interests.

The Whitney government is going to do something about the taxation of railways. But what it is remains a profound mystery. It is safe in assuming that it will not be the tax which Pettypiece suggested, and which Mr. Hanna professedly approved.

When the federal parliament forbids by law any member acting as an intermediary with the government concerning schemes in which he is interested, fewer lawyers may desire election. But the learned gentlemen must practice somewhere on some people!

The Grand Trunk Railway company will have its own telephone lines. The C.P.R. will probably follow suit. Then the provinces and cities will have their systems. The Bell monument in Brantford, may eventually be a reminder of what "has been" in Canada.

Stead's advice to public writers is good. It appears in System. But there is one test that is very trying. It is to cultivate correspondence with a superior woman, one too old to wed or be spooned, and with the time and inclination to draw out the finest thoughts in man. The address of such a woman would be welcomed by the Whig's young men.

Dr. Shoop's remedies are all fresh at Gibson's Red Cross drug store, opposite Whig office. Phone 230.

Death of Mrs. Burnash. Dufferin, April 14.—On Friday morning, April 14th, the friends of Mrs. John Burnash were shocked to hear that she had passed away at the Hotel Dieu. About a year ago she underwent an operation for cancer, and while the operation was a success, she never regained her former strength. A few days ago pneumonia set in, and, deceased gradually sank, until 3:30 Friday morning, when her spirit took its flight. Mrs. Burnash, whose maiden name was Hattie Morah, was born in Inverary, May 30th, 1871, her father being the late George Morah. On November 20th, 1896, she was married to John Burnash, and for some time they resided at South Lake, after which they removed to Dufferin. Deceased leaves to mourn her a husband and four little children, also a mother, sister and brother. Mrs. Burnash was a loving wife and a devoted mother, and deep sympathy is felt for her husband and family, who have been so sadly bereaved. On Sunday, a large number of the friends followed the remains to Cathedral church, where a solemn funeral service was held, after which they were taken to St. Barnaby's cemetery, and placed in the vault.

Mrs. M. T. Raymond, who died suddenly in Guelph, was the eldest daughter of Joel Parmenter, Gananoque. She leaves two sons and one daughter.
