special Correspondence Letter, No. 1,509. New York, April 20 .- It is the unexpected that usually happens. We were prepared to welcome Easter Sunday with sunshine and flowers, without consulting the clerk of the weather: sat down and wrote a brilliant count of the opening of Easter Sun day morning. When the original Kearsarge was destroyed, the government resolved to perpetuate the name and it almost seems like a special providence that the inheritor of her glorious title was not blown, to pieces in the accident which caused such heartfelt and sorrowful ruin. Everything at home and abroad seems unsettled. The news comes to us from Naples that Vesuvius grows quieter, that the sky is clearing, and he worst is past. Perhaps so; but the fearful mutterings continue, and dount Pelce, in Martinique, is not giving evidence of good behaviour. These fearful explosions in differen parts of the world, whether they are the frozen pole or under equator, beget an uneasiness of anticipation about what might occur and which is altogether within the range possibility. This successful financier saved his pennics in his boy-, the pennies grew to dimes, the dimes to dollars, the dollars to hundreds, the hundreds to uncounted millions. He subsidizes colleges, he aids poor churches, but the great body of his munificence does not find its way to the homes of the poor. After gifts amounting to over fifty millions of dollars he installs a clergyman as the almoner of his bounty, and so work goes on. Let us look back a mo centres the empire is to-day flooded with dailies and quarterlies. Since the Boxer catastrophe the Chinese have realized that the press is an essential element of public life, so every Chinaman reads his newspaper, even the emperor. The new journals are almost invariably modelled upon the Shan-Pao, published at Shanghai since 1860 yard and a half long, folded into eight pages. It costs one cent. In China, while there are no laws restricting freedom of speech and of the press, there are, on the other hand, no laws to guarantee those rights. Consequently the Chinese journals are at the mercy of the police and the viceroys. At present the Chinese press is not the organ of a political party, but rather a sort of eclectic review of current affairs and a means of popularizing political and social knowledge. It is therefore neither an ally nor a foe of the government. China has no official journalism, no opposition journalism. Hibernian Homemade Goods Crowding Imported Article. Dublin, April 17.-The report of the Irish Industries' association of Cork is full of interest this year. It shows that the industrial propaganda be pushed forward, not by generalities, but by attending to details. The energetic secretary of the society, Mr. Riordan, by prompt action, prevented an order for iron, gates going out of the city.

"A local firm, whose books have just been audited," says the report, formed the council that their wages bill had increased $4,250 during the past twelve months. This is accounted for by the fact that during -that during that period they manufactured a considerable number of articles which they previously imported. This took place under the stimulus of local industrial patriotism.

A large English firm of soapmakers have been giving away half-pound samples of their soap to Cork housekeepers during the past few weeks, One of their representatives stated that it was necessary, as their trade in Cork had been badly hit owing to the demand which existed for Irishmade soan.

Scrupulous Honesty. New York Tribune.

A Scotchman who went to an English race course staked a sovereign. The horse he backed proved a wirner, and he went to the "bookie" to claim his winnings. The sporting man begrudgingly handed him five sovereigns. The Scot looked at each one very care fully before placing it in his pocket. "Well," said the bookie, with a snarl, "are you afraid they're bad ?" "Oh no," said the Scotsman; "but I was just looking to mak' sure the bad yin I gie's ye wisna among them."

There is no hope for the man who knowingly persists in acting the fool,
