

Cure For The Blues
ONE MEDICINE THAT HAS NEVER FAILED
Health Fully Restored and the Joy of Life Regained.

When a cheerful, brave, light-hearted woman is suddenly plunged into that perfection of misery, the BLUES, it is a sad picture. It is usually this way: "She has been feeling 'out of sorts' for some time; head has ached and back also; has slept poorly, been quite nervous, and nearly fainting once or twice; head dizzy, and heart-beats very fast; then that weary-down feeling, and during her periods she is exceedingly despondent. Nothing pleases her. Her doctor says: 'Cheer up, you have dyspepsia; you will be all right soon.' But she doesn't get 'all right,' and those headaches; then come the brooding, morbid, melancholy, overcast BLUES; head don't until your sufferings have driven you to despair, with your nerves all shattered and your courage gone, but take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. See what it did for Madam Josephine Rivville, Mastai, Que. She writes: Mrs. Pinkham: "I suffered for four years with female troubles—inflammation of the stomach and fallopian tubes which caused violent pain and often torture, so much so that I could not walk at times and attend to my daily duties. Life was misery to me. I was so lame and dependent I did not know which way to turn for relief. I had tried the doctors but they did not help me. I was advised to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I bought a bottle. I am glad that I did so, for I am well and strong today and the world looks bright, for I have perfect health, thanks to your medicine."

If you have some derangement of the female organism write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice.

BANQUET AT ODESSA.
Given By Citizens to Manager of Crown Bank.

On Friday evening a banquet was tendered to G. H. Francis, manager of Crown Bank branch at Odessa, by the leading business men and farmers in the vicinity. The occasion was to mark Mr. Francis' popularity and business ability as a bank manager, he having been called to Odessa to take charge of the new branch there. At about 8:30 o'clock the banquet got down to an excellent menu supplied by Sidney J. Sproule, proprietor of the Dominion hotel. Speeches were delivered by Lieut.-Col. Clyde, Dr. H. E. Day, ex-reeves Hanson and Ham, Noble Bond, R. W. Peters, Marshall Paratt and Card Paratt, all testifying to the good will and esteem towards Mr. Francis, the benefit derived from the Crown bank from the farmers' standpoint, and expressing sincere regret at Mr. Francis' removal. The committee in charge were Lieut.-Col. Clyde, E. O. Clark, Bernard Toomey and James Fraser.

FR. GAPON'S DEATH
REPORT CONFIRMS FORMER RUMORS OF MURDER.

Would Betray Terrorists—Latter, Suspicious, Set a Trap Into Which Priest Walks—Disappears After Crossing the Finnish Frontier.

St. Petersburg, April 30.—The Narvya Vremya prints a circumstantial story which tends to confirm the reports that Father Gapon has been assassinated by a revolutionist. Father Gapon is represented as having entered into relations with a group of the "Fighting Organization," of the terrorists, and in order to test his loyalty, one of the leaders, an engineer named Rutenberg, under the alias of Martini, offered to betray the secrets of the organization to the government. Gapon, according to the story, took the bait and offered to conduct the negotiations.

Some haggling about the price to be paid followed, Rutenberg demanding $50,000. Finally, however, on his agreeing to accept $12,500 Gapon went to Odessa, a small place beyond the Finnish frontier, to meet Rutenberg for a consummation of the agreement. He has not been seen since.

A Jewess named Holstein, a member of a group of revolutionaries, one of Gapon's friends, who knew he was in close consultation at that time, mysteriously disappeared the day afterwards.

The plain inference is, the paper says, that the revolutionaries, finding Gapon to be a traitor, executed him, and that Gapon's papers, which reached his lawyer, Margolin, from Berlin a few days ago, were forwarded by the Holstein woman.

The Associated Press investigated the report printed by a newspaper that Father Gapon was living in concealment in an apartment that formerly was the headquarters of his organization, but found the report was due to the presence there of a priest similar in appearance to Gapon who recently returned from Vladivostok.

THE NURSES' BILL.
What the Valorous Archdeacon Objected to.

No piece of heavy tragedy on the stage could be more serious or intense than the feelings and actions in legislative halls at Toronto over the bill to incorporate graduates of hospital training schools. When a woman says she will, as the proverb says, you may bet she will. The petitioners resolved on a strong measure, giving them the arbitrary, as well as centralizing powers Toronto is ever seeking to acquire at the expense of the whole province. They met generous support from Toronto hospital graduates located in other cities, in official positions in several cases. From an admirable personal impulse, the speaker of the house became their strong champion, with Dr. Willoughby and Mr. Crawford, member for Toronto East, as his lieutenants. The nurses did not present their petitions through their respective city representatives, thus avoiding local investigation, but relied on these three men of stalwart frame and forcible manners to prop up their frail craft over the rough waters.

At the first meeting of the special committee fully fifty nurses attended and in this charming and admiring audience the three sponsors played their strongest roles. A few renegade members of the committee suggested a modification of the powers sought, but were literally told to sit down and be good. The bill was forced through with what the Irish members of the British house would style brute force. It was an unprecedented scene, since under the rule of both parties in that house has been accorded the fullest right of discussion and decision in committee. The fairness of this course is seen when it is considered that proceedings in committee cannot be criticized in the house.

But the bill was not at once reported. Dr. Willoughby, as chairman, held the document. A little bird of the mischievous order, which read the four medical practitioners proposed in the bill to form, with eleven nurses, the governing council, could all be women physicians. Clearly some would be, as one of the promoters of the act was a lady doctor. At once the Mayor Ellis Gives Address of Civic Welcome—The Affair Informal—Took Place in Open Air—The Plutocrat Pleasured.

Ottawa, April 30.—Andrew Carnegie spent this morning quietly resting at Rideau Hall, and at noon took luncheon as the guest of Sir Sandford Fleming. This afternoon, at three o'clock, he formally opened the Carnegie public library here which was erected at a cost of $100,000.

Mayor Ellis presented a civic address of welcome, conveying thanks for his magnificent gift. Mr. Carnegie made an appropriate reply. He congratulated the city on the style and finish of the building. The affair was informal, there being but few invitations issued. It took place in the open air, the distinguished party taking up a position on the broad stone steps leading to the library.

It is reported that Sir Eliza Taschereau, chief justice of supreme court of Canada, will retire from the bench at the expiration of his six months' leave of absence. Under an act of a few years ago he will receive pension of full pay. It is said that Mr. Fitzpatrick, minister of justice, may succeed him.

UNIVERSITY FEDERATION.
What Federation Means to the University of Toronto the Subject of an Address by Hon. G. W. Ross.

A large number of students attended the monthly meeting of Toronto University Y. M. C. A., on which occasion Hon. Geo. W. Ross at once entered upon his subject, that of university federation which had placed the university in an inexpressible position and had made of it, he thought he could fairly say, one of the strongest educational institutions on the continent. After a brief reference to the establishment of the university by grants from the Crown, Mr. Ross dealt with its situation in 1853, when its resources were insufficient to support the students made to the Legislature for aid. To this the denominational universities objected, and an impasse was reached. It was a serious problem for the Government and the Legislature to adopt, the other situation he, as then Minister of Education, had a conference with the former Chancellor of the university, Sir Wm. Mulock, over the difficulties and dangers of the situation. There were two ways for overcoming these: one by educating the Legislature up to the necessity of taking action its members had refused to adopt, the other in getting the other universities to federate with Toronto.

After some negotiations a conference was brought about with representatives of the denominational institutions of Ontario, followed by other conferences, with the result that towards the end of the autumn of 1884 a basis of federation with Victoria, Trinity and Queen's was reached. Queen's University finally declined to federate, because that would have meant removal from Kingston to Toronto. The people of Kingston and the denomination it represented stood joyfully by Queen's. Trinity also declined. In 1887, however, Mr. Ross had the pleasure of introducing a bill in the Legislature in which the confederation of Victoria University with the University of Toronto was concurred in and the door opened for others to take the same step. By federation with the University of Toronto, Victoria and the other institutions which came in after became a sharer in the State grants for higher education. The University of Toronto also gained materially in influence and importance. One of the conditions of federation was that the science side of the university should be greatly strengthened, and one of the first results was the establishment of the department of physiology, which was followed by the establishment of the department of political science, enumerating among the affiliated institutions the Ontario Agricultural College, the Royal College of Dental Surgeons, the School of Practical Science, the College of Music, the Ontario College of Pharmacy and the School of Veterinary Surgery. These affiliations did not mean such close connection as the federations, nevertheless they were a source of strength and influence, giving power to any movement for the advancement of the university.

The act of 1887 also restored the medical faculty, and the university absorbed the School of Medicine. Later the University of Toronto gave the Trinity University Schools of Medicine, and in the affiliated schools $251,000, total of 4,825 young men and women looking to the University of Toronto for their final status in education. The influence and importance of such a body of national matters and on the life of the country was not easily realized. He trusted the people would not have to look in vain for capacity, refinement, high character and the splendid service to the country by university graduates, which would be their reward for the contributions made towards the university. Mr. Ross says interesting figures respecting the growth of the university teaching staff coincident with the other expansions of the university. Another expansion of its marvelous growth was afforded by the necessary increased accommodation provided. Twenty odd years ago everything was under one roof, and more room was sadly needed. Mr. Ross told of the erection of the Biological, Medical, School of Science and the buildings of the university, to which in all the province had contributed over $600,000, making, with the contributions of the university and the university college, an expenditure on buildings of something like $1,250,000.

As to the expense of maintaining the university, twenty years ago he said the whole cost was $226,000, towards which about $120,000 came out of the pockets of the ratepayers of the province.

Mr. Ross asked of what use would the university be without matriculants. For these it had to depend on the high schools. Twenty years ago only 272 matriculated from the high schools, last year there were 851. This was the result of raising the standard of and the expansion of the high school system of the province. He pointed out how closely the whole plan of education was related.

His idea of the university was that it should pervade every calling alike and should fit a man for any calling in life.

Swallowed a Milk Snake.
For some months a daughter of Mr. Wm. Klemm, West Ward, has not been in good health, and imagined that there was something alive in her stomach, says The Mitchell Advocate. At times she could feel it crawling up her throat and would have to take food to send it back. The sensation was anything but pleasant, but relief came one day last week, when the young lady was visiting in the country, and drinking a glass of cream, which did not agree with her, took a fit of coughing and up came a milk snake measuring 14 inches in length and still alive. Judging from the size of the reptile, it must have been in the victim's stomach about two years, and no doubt was swallowed while drinking from a pool of water.

It seems quite the thing for the puglist to drink out of a punch bowl. In the end, one's vanity will prove to have been all in vain. The wood-cutter doesn't even know it when he splits infinites.

Enthusiasm sets the pace, but common sense wins in a walk.

Where is Heaven?
East and West.
A minister preached a sermon on the following day, said, "That was a good sermon; but you did not tell us where heaven is."

"Do you see yonder cottage?" said the minister. "In that little cottage is a poor sick woman. She has neither food nor fuel. If you will send her coal, take her some provisions and say, 'I bring you these in the name of the merciful Saviour of you will then read the twenty-third Psalm, and go down upon your knees and pray, you will find heaven before you leave.'"

"Selfishness knows no heaven. Heaven comes by doing the will of God. I must be about my Father's business," said our Lord. And His Father's business was to be subject to His parents, as He was to be subject to His Father's business, to put as much good science into the making of a bench or a plough, as He afterwards put into the work of His public ministries. Follow in the footsteps of the Master. Put conscience into everything we do. Try and make others happy. Cheer the lonely; comfort the sad; help the needy; give the cheery smile, and we shall find heaven upon earth.
