Fifth Class Agitation.

The place of the fifth class, for which some people, a small minority, clamour, is very doubtful. Such classes are in other places, but the usefulness of them, or the need of them, cannot be determined by anything that has been so far learned. In Kingston there is a very direct connection between the public and high schools and any one who desires to go forward in his studies can be accommodated on easy terms.

Some years ago the commercial class in the public school was abolished because it seemed to be doing, at a considerable cost, the work which had, in any case, and according to law, to be done at the institute, and if the practice of economy was then commendable it is not to be scouted now when the introduction of a fifth class to the school system here seems like the putting of a fifth wheel on a coach.

At the same time the board of education acts wisely in undertaking a deeper study of the question, and with the desire to afford all the information which is available. The idea prevails with some that the model school will be abolished this year, and that the machinery of it will be at the disposal of the board should the fifth class be required. The model schools are not likely to go out of existence so quickly as that. Their work cannot be abolished until the normal schools have been built and equipped and so made ready for occupation, and this date according to present indications, will be a long way off.

Care Of The Insane.

A new law has been adopted with regard to the commitment of persons to the lunatic asylums. Always, so far as any one can remember in Canada, the proceeding looking to the incarceration of one in a public institution has been attended by the desire to confine only those who cannot be trusted at large.

The lunatics have been of two kinds, those who are temporarily deranged, and those who are hopelessly insane. In any case mental treatment by skillful alienists has been helpful. Some cures are effected, and perhaps the percentage is larger than anyone suspects. Even the chronically affected are the better off under influences which can be brought to bear upon them by the asylum experts.

The event of importance to the unfortunate man or woman is the entrance to the asylum. The mental status must be settled beyond all question. A good many were formerly passed through the jail while medical men studied their cases. There is to be no further use of the jail by the insane.

That humiliation—for humiliation it is—will not again be put upon them. The asylum accommodation will be used as far as it goes, and admission to it will be had upon the certificates of two men, one of whom may (and will when possible), be an officer of the asylum.

The advantage of this will be that the judgment of an alienist will be secured in pronouncing upon the case, and at the same time the information will be had which will enable the government to determine whether or not payment can be exacted for the care of the individual.

There is a decided increase of insanity in the province, and the greatest pains should be taken to discriminate between it and the temporary mental collapse which does not warrant the extreme measures concerning them which some people are disposed to take.

The Indemnity Stands.

The salary question has been revived in the commons on motion of Mr. Maclean, of South York. Mr. Maclean, has been the most offensive of all the critics, and he has fallen foul of friends and foes politically because he has insinuated many things and has himself been faulty. He did not oppose the increased indemnity when it was under discussion, and he accepted all that was coming to him under the law although he was largely ranked as an absentee.

The indemnity of $2,500 remains. Only nine members favoured a reduction in the amount. The house, therefore, almost unanimously felt that, considering the long sessions and absence of members from business or practice, greatly to their loss, the amount was small enough, and not in excess of their deserts.

The pension part of the act of 1901 will be revised. That is the promise of the premier. It seems that originally it was meant that British practice should be followed, and pensions given to those who earned them by service or really needed them. The Canadian rule became operative automatically, but it applied to all ex-ministers without distinction as to financial conditions. The minister of justice is now giving the matter attention, and in the hope of removing defects from it.

Incidentally Mr. Borden paid his respects to Mr. Maclean for the "ragging" the journalist has been giving his leader on every possible occasion. He said Mr. Maclean had not read the pension act carefully else he would have criticised it differently. As for his salary he thought it better to receive it from the country than from the party. In any case it had not affected his independence as a critic of the government and its measures.

Mr. Maclean will probably subside now on the salary question. He has of late been joined by the Montreal Star, and the joint effort to impress the house has not been effective. Public feeling has not been effusive. The papers or the members of parliament are not in estimating current opinion and for the time being the members have the best of it.

A Change Of Base.

The power scheme of the Whitney government is not what they promised the people of Ontario. That promise, as the Brantford Expositor points out, was to purchase or develop electric energy and to transmit and deliver it to the municipalities at cost. The present proposals, while they contain powers of appropriation of existing plants, really aim at the purchase of power from the existing companies, at a figure which will certainly be above cost. Furthermore, all the risk incident to development or purchase or transmission is to rest upon the municipalities.

In short the bill will be of little use, save possibly to a large corporation like Toronto, because the chances of getting a union of municipalities are not very bright, and without such union nothing is likely to be done.

The resolution of the conservatives while in opposition sets forth their position then most clearly. Here are the concluding words:

"In the opinion of this house the waters of Niagara river and its tributaries, as well as the waters of other streams when necessary, should, at the earliest moment, and subject to existing agreement be utilized directly by the provincial government in order that the latter may generate and develop electricity, and pneumatic power for the purpose of light, heat and power, and furnish the same to municipalities in this province at cost."

They have got a long way off from the attitude they had when they were posing for pictures. When the responsibility did not rest upon them Mr. Whitney and his friends wanted the government to do things. Now a commission will act on behalf of the municipalities, if desired, but under conditions which may make the power issue anything but a practical one.

Valuable Tapestries Found.

Boston, Mass., May 12.—Considerable interest has been caused in Boston by the discovery of a tapestry that the famous tapestries of Lebrun, representing summer, autumn and winter, which were stolen from the Palais Royal in Paris during the revolution, are now on exhibition in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. It is stated that the discovery was made by Emile Bernat, a tapestry expert from Paris, who was called here to renovate the three tapestries. He found two tags between the living and the web, reading "Palais Royal, Salon No. 5." He declared the tapestries to be the work of Lebrun and expressed the opinion that they were made between 1690 and 1730. According to the records of the museum the tapestries came to Boston fifty years ago. If genuine they are the only Lebruns in America, and practically priceless.

The Bacon Hog.

A pamphlet on the production of hogs in Canada for the British bacon trade is ready for distribution from the office of the live stock commissioner at Ottawa. It is divided into fourteen parts, each dealing with a section of the bacon industry under the heads of standard type, undesirable hogs, breeds and breeding, rearing and finishing, cost of gain at different stages of growth, soft bacon, food, gestation. Besides the personal experience of the commissioner and his staff, every reliable source of information within reach was drawn upon in securing data. The bacon industry of Canada is worth thirteen million dollars per year. To encourage and assist this valuable trade this bulletin has been prepared with great care.
