BLOOD HUMORS

PIMPLES Many an otherwise beautiful and attractive face is sadly marred by unsightly blotches, eruptions, flesh worms and humors, and various other blood diseases.

Their presence is a source of embarrassment to those afflicted, as well as pain and regret to their friends.

Many a cheek and brow—cast in the mould of grace and beauty—have been sadly defaced, their attractiveness lost, and their possessor rendered unhappy for years.

Why, then, consent to rest under this cloud of embarrassment?

There is an effective remedy for all these defects, it is,

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

This remedy will drive out all the impurities from the blood and leave the complexion healthy and clear.

Miss Annie Tobin, Madoc, Ont., writes: "I take great pleasure in recommending your Burdock Blood Bitters to any one who may be troubled with pimples on the face."

POTATO SCAB

Can Be Prevented by Destroying Fungi.

Potatoes pitted with holes and roughened on the skin are afflicted with a minute fungus, resulting in what is known as the potato scab.

These little parasites reproduce themselves just as the higher plants do. They can increase by division of the little plant itself, or by spores which with them, act as seeds in higher organisms.

These propagative agencies were probably on the seed potatoes. Progressive people in these days never risk any important crop without steeping the seeds to destroy insects and fungi.

Simple copperas water has been found efficient, but for those who prefer to try other methods the following is recommended: Formalin, will practically free seed potatoes from scab germs by immersion for two hours in a solution of one part of formalin to 300 parts of water. It is equal to corrosive sublimate in efficiency, and is without its dangerous and troublesome properties, being a non-poisonous non-corrosive substance. Seed of seemingly good quality, as well as that much affected with scab, shows excellent results from the formalin treatment. The recipe for its use is to add about one-half pint of formalin to fifteen gallons of water, and soak the potatoes in it for two hours before planting. This solution may be used several times.

Rate Insect.

There is in the American museum of natural history a butterfly which cost between $1,500 and $2,000. This rare insect exists only in Sierra Leone, and an expedition had to be fitted out and maintained for two years before it was captured.

Don't think, because a man offers an apology, that he really means it.

LORD OF AGRICULTURE

MINISTER LORD CARRINGTON IN THE BRITISH CABINET.

Derives His Income, Estimated at $600,000 a Year, Exclusively From Land, and Does Not Own a Single Share of Stock or Bond of Any Sort Whatever—One of King's Oldest Personal Friends.

No more appropriate appointment could possibly have been made in the Liberal Administration in England than that of Lord Carrington to the post of Minister of Agriculture, writes the Mail from London. Carrington, who has been among the members of the House of Lords, he derives his income exclusively from land, that is to say, from agriculture, and was able to boast the other day, at the banquet of the Farmers' Club at Whitehall Court that he did not own a single share of stock or bond of any kind whatsoever, an extraordinary condition of affairs when it is borne in mind that he is a rich man and that his annual income is rated at considerably over $600,000.

His appointment must also be extremely agreeable to the royal family. For he is one of the oldest personal friends of King Edward, and in their younger days they were almost inseparable. Carrington's second son, John, was descended from the same stock as Lord Pauncefoot—namely, from Abel Smith, the Nottingham banker, who flourished at the beginning of the eighteenth century. Abel had three sons of whom the first was George, who was created a baronet and whose eldest son and namesake assumed the name of Carrington in lieu of Smith, his descendant, the present holder of the baronetcy, being Sir Robert Bromley, married to the late Lord Pauncefoot's daughter, Lillian. Abel Smith's second son, John, was the ancestor of the late Lord Pauncefoot. The third son of Abel, bore the same name and had a son of his own named Robert, who was the friend and banker of the famous Prime Minister, Pitt, and for whom the latter secured, with a good deal of difficulty, a peerage from George III. It was written in the Illustrated London News in 1871, "any one in trade" to the House of Lords. Pitt was of a different opinion. He held that any man of good repute, possessed of an income of $100,000 a year, derived from entailed landed property, was, ipso facto, entitled to a peerage, and he had his way.

Pitt's friend selected as his title that of Lord Carrington, and his son, following the example of the other descendants of the original Abel Smith, assumed the name of Carrington from his patronymic from Smith to Carrington.

The present Lord Carrington was one of the few cronies of King Edward of whom his mother, the late Mrs. Carrington, was extremely fond, and she bestowed upon him many marks of favor, promoting him from a baronetcy to an earldom, and appointing him to all sorts of offices, including those of captain of the corps of the gentlemen-at-arms, governor of the colony of New South Wales, and Lord Chamberlain of the Exchequer, holding the latter office that Lord Carrington, in fulfilling his duties as censor of the drama, had his memorable encounter with Fay Templeton on the subject of her costume, when she was appearing at the Gaiety theatre in London.

Sixty-three, bespectacled, and most benevolent looking, it is hard to present to oneself that Lord Carrington was forty years ago the associate of his equally gray-haired sovereign in many a frolic and harvest-home prank, and that he was the principal actor in one of the most sensational horse-whipping scandals of the nineteenth century. The castigation was administered to Grenville Murray, former author and journalist, for holding up the earl to ridicule and obloquy, under the pseudonym of "Bob Chousington, Lord Carrington" in a weekly newspaper, and society order entitled the Queen's Messenger.

Grenville Murray, who received a terrible drubbing, brought suit against Lord Carrington for assault and for the imposition of a fine of $500. But during the course of the legal proceedings he was unfortunate enough to swear to something that was not true, and thereupon Lord Carrington proceeded against him for perjury. To escape the consequences of a certain conviction Murray fled to France, where he remained an exile from his native land until his death.

Grenville Murray was understood to be a natural son of Lord Palmerston, who was his protector as long as he lived, and who certainly gave him his first appointment in the diplomatic service. He wrote a number of books, of which the best known are "The Member for Paris," and "Sidelights of English Society," which latter is of the most libelous description and long since out of print. He collaborated with Sir Edmund Yates in starting the London weekly, World, and died under a Spanish name and title of count which he had obtained through his marriage into a Spanish family. Lord Carrington is married to a daughter of Lord Suffield, the favorite lord-in-waiting of the King and the oldest member of his household, and has a younger brother, Col. Sir William Carrington, who is the controller of the household of the Prince of Wales. Sir William Carrington, who was also assistant private secretary and squerry to the late Queen, has an American wife, a daughter of the late Francis Warden.

One of the queerest titles which Sir William has had to perform has been to direct the operations of the party composed of yeomen of the guard in their quaint medieval uniforms, and of modern garbed policemen, who, at night before the opening of Parliament search the vaults and cellars beneath the House of Lords and the House of Commons. This is more of a historical ceremony than a measure of precaution, and it dates back to the day of King James I. and of the gunpowder plot. It is scarcely necessary to relate here the time-honored story of the Pawkes was discovered on Nov. 6, 1605, concealed in the vaults beneath the Rev. J. H. George, D.D., Ph.D., formerly of Stratford, Ont., and now president of the Chicago Theological Seminary, is returning to the regular place of the Congregational Union of Ontario and Quebec, June 4th to 9th. The union during its half century of organization has always met in a city, and this change to a rural community should prove interesting and profitable.

At a church meeting held in the suburbs of New York the church was made whether a certain lawyer of the congregation, interested in the insurance investigation, had "got religion." To this another lawyer responded, "No, he has not, unless it is in his wife's name."

Bishop DuMoilin, is working on a scheme for the erection of a building in the centre of Hamilton, to be used by all branches of the Anglican church in that city. His plan is to have the synod office in the building, and also to have a lecture room to be used for gatherings of all sorts. His lordship intends to open a new parish on the top of the mountain.

An anecdote is narrated of a negro evangelist who held evinings in a chapel formerly used by the Anglican church. In a hymn which had familiar hymn suitable for his sex, somewhat confused him, and was not able to announce it. As with the custom, he read the verses through, still showing signs of embarrassment, and then re-read the first stanza. This did not seem to aid him or the congregation, and at last he straightened himself and said with dignity, "Brethren, let us sing the sheekh hymn."

BISON FURNACE

With a Bison Hot Water Furnace in the basement, there is little need for brush or scraper. No place in it for soot or dirt to lodge, and its flues are practically self-cleaning. In most furnaces the water jackets are constantly covered with soot and ashes, requiring constant cleaning to enable the fire to heat the water—a dirty job.

The Bison has more good heating points than all other heaters combined. THE H. R. IVES CO., LIMITED. MONTREAL.

ADMIRAL DOUGLAS

ADMIRAL DOUGLAS

Admiral Sir Archibald L. Douglas was born in Quebec in 1842. By virtue of his position as commander-in-chief at Esquimaux he received the King on the occasion of his visit there some weeks ago. The admiral is the son of the late Dr. G. Mellis Douglas, inspecting physician of the Assiniboia hospital in that city. His father was a midshipman on H. M. S. Boscaawen, then the flagship of the North American and West Indies squadron. In 1861 he was made lieutenant on the Arrogant, and on this vessel he saw service in connection with the Congo and Gambia River expeditions. During the Fenian invasion of 1866 he used a gunboat on the great lakes and four years later he was promoted to the rank of commander. In 1878 he was appointed in charge of the port of Quebec, and was sent to instruct the Japanese in naval warfare and acted as director of the Japanese Imperial Naval College for two years. How well he taught, and how apt were his pupils recent history tells. His name is coupled with nearly every important operation in which the navy has participated since 1880. In 1881 he was appointed to the post of commander-in-chief at Portsmouth.

A Gladstone Story.

A story of Mr. Gladstone was told by the late Mr. Ehnlender, president of the United States Museum of Art. A miniature painter had been employed to paint a portrait of Mrs. Gladstone in her old age. It was intended that it should be a present for Mr. Gladstone on one of his birthdays. Mrs. Gladstone was particularly well pleased with the portrait, but some of the grandchildren had opinions of their own about it. One of the younger grandsons drew Mr. Gladstone aside, and asked him if he did not think that the portrait was somewhat flattering. "It isn't much like grandmother, is it?" he asked. "My boy," replied Mr. Gladstone, in his beautiful voice, "it is the truth beautifully told. That's all."—Dundee Advertiser.
