Disease A Benefit To Man. According to Sir Frederick Treves, the well-known physician of London, disease is not man's enemy, but his best friend. It is, he says, nature's effort to dislodge bacteria from the system. Therefore, he considers it a great mistake to try to stamp out at once the symptoms of disease in a patient, which is . what the doctor generally does. Do not try to stop the cough too soon, because the cough is the practical means of ridding the dpipe of bacteria. Similarly, Sir Frederick holds that the inflammation in a wound is a process of cure, to be aided rather than hindered. But he admits that in the machinations certain disorder as, for instance, a cancer, he has not as yet been able to find any good purpose,
