Spotting Their Cause.

The women suffragists were favoured originally because it was believed that their participation in an election would lead to the most refining effects. They would, of course, be incorruptible and the introduction of an absolutely pure and free vote was expected to bring about rare results.

But in Kingston some years ago, during a vote on prohibition, the women did not rally in support of the cause as they were expected to do. In several municipal contests since then women who have votes, for aldermen and school trustees, have not taken an active interest in passing events, and only a proportion of them, not a majority it is alleged, can be persuaded to exercise their privilege. Remembering all this the demand for the enfranchisement of women in Canada has not grown in popularity.

And what of England? Premier Campbell-Bannerman had an exciting hour of it when he undertook to explain that while a sympathizer personally with their aims his government was not favourable to their plans. Mr. Asquith, at Northampton, had an exciting time when the women screamed him down, and because an effort was made to eject them they claved at the men and made an awful show of themselves. No more rowdy meeting, rough in manner and in speech, was ever held in this notable centre.

The women are surely spoiling their cause. They were to bring intelligence and moral suasion into politics, and in England they have disgraced themselves. The disreputable proceedings at Northampton cannot be atoned for easily. Mr. Asquith can be counted on to oppose the suffragists with all the power he can command, and he is a great leader of public opinion.

Opinion At A Discount.

The stories from England, and occasionally the cables, which speak of seeming weakness in the government and the possibility of an early dissolution of parliament, must be taken with a discount. The everlasting talk about discontent and dissension is part of a conspiracy or understanding with the subsidized press. The opinion formerly prevailed that the English papers spoke honestly on every question, but no consideration could wrap or influence the editorial mind.

But desperate situations suggest desperate experiments. The Chamberlain party perceived the brilliant idea of having as many papers as possible advocating protection or fiscal reform, and this was brought about by the purchase of some of the leading papers, and having them co-operate with the Harmsworth and Pearson syndicates. The result is that the papers which formerly reflected public opinion now essay the task of manufacturing it. The effect is apparent. The fiscal reform journals were as rabid before the elections as they are now, and they pointed to a great victory for Chamberlain. The defeat of the Balfour government and of the Chamberlain party was most complete. The Bannerman majority was simply too large. It had to suffer sooner or later. There have been signs of a falling away.

Majorities, as some one has remarked, do disappear, sometimes quickly. This was the experience four or five years ago. It will be the case again. But there is no real sign of an early collapse as yet, all the reports of the subsidized press to the contrary. The papers that were put under the hammer for political effect, that were required for a purpose, may be meeting the demands of their buyers. But the average Englishman is not a stupid. He is not taking his politics from the hitting of any syndicate, though he tender his advice with the semblance of sincerity.

Editorial Notes.

With the manufacturers as well as workmen against the convict labour contract—the three cents an hour deal—the Whitney government ought to discover that it has made a mistake.

The Toronto News is not impressed with the composition of the railway and municipal commission. The members of it are not "big men." Office or opportunity may make them great.

The Montreal Gazette looks for the defeat of Thomas Murray, in North Renfrew. And this when the old man purposes as the friend of the conservatives and wants to represent them as well as the liberals in parliament.

Bradford has, by-by-laws, read three times in the council, lowered and fixed the management for a number

CHARGE HIGH LICENSE

On Bill Boards, and Make Kingston Beautiful.

There is a movement on foot to license bill boards, after the plan followed in some American cities. It is receiving support from many citizens, and some of the ladies' societies will hear the subject discussed before long. There is a good means, according to some thinkers, of doing away with the unsightly fences and semi-moral posters which decorate them, by placing such a high license fee on bill boards that their value for such purposes would become nil. It might also be a step towards making Kingston beautiful. The boards near St. Andrew's church, and opposite St. George's cathedral, are pointed to as illustrations of the case in point.

He says he expects another Chinese outbreak and that it will be a general patriotic movement to free China from foreign restrictions. Before he left Shanghai the "China for the Chinese" movement, he said, was assuming an alarming phase.

Happy Time Spent at School Closing.

An unusual feature of the prize-winning at the closing of Miss Ada Bates' school, on Thursday, was that three prizes, given for sewing, by three wise mothers, Mrs. Walter Macnee, Mrs. J. M. Campbell, and Mrs. John Waddell. Prizes, in the various grades, were won by the Misses Charlotte Shortt, Helen Campbell, Margaret and wee Elizabeth Cunningham, Kathleen Crisp, John Ogilvie. All whom Miss Bates had invited to her closing spent a happy afternoon, listening to her pupils sing, recite and drill. One song in particular, Miss Macnar's "Canada," set to music by Hector MacCarthy, was highly praised.

J. B. Walker was most amusing as chairman, and Canon Starr presenting the prizes. He told the children to be always sure to look for the beauty in the common every-day things, telling them how the mud on their feet, and the sand and soot, if left long enough under happy conditions, become porcelain, and the blue sapphire, and the fiery-hearted opal, and the blazing diamond, jewels for the crowns of kings.

There are forty cases of smallpox in Western Ontario.

Madame Melba is suffering in London from a nervous breakdown.

On Thursday Owen Sound celebrated its fiftieth anniversary as an incorporated town.

Sagua La Grande, a Cuban town of 15,000 people, is said to have been destroyed by flood and fire.

Miss Ann Preston, known as "Holy Ann," died in Toronto, Thursday, at the age of one hundred years.

Cotton manufacturers at Fall River have granted to their operatives an increase of fourteen per cent.

At Lissoia, near Monastir, June 17th, a Greek band murdered eight Bulgarians, including two priests.

After July 1st, Orillia will cease to be a sub-part of the Toronto customs house, as the town is then to have a warehouse of its own.

Hon. Mr. Lemoine, since his appointment to the postmaster-generalship has also been placed at head of the labor department.

The handsome cathedral at Nicolet, Que., the convent and the bishop's palace were burned on Thursday night. The loss is about $400,000.

Central Presbyterian church, Hamilton, has decided to extend a call to Rev. W. H. Sedgwick, of Charlotte town, P.E.I., as assistant minister.

At last the United States senate has stamped its approval of the lock system for the Panama canal. The work will now be prosecuted vigorously.

China has advised the French foreign office that full indemnity will be given for the murder of the Jesuit missionaries in Kiang-Si in February last.

Miss Mae Woods' suit against Senator Platt for $25,000 for services rendered while in the post office department was dismissed at Omaha, yesterday.

In a fight between William Slater, Lester Young and others on the steamer Monarch, en route to the Soo, Lester Young received injuries that proved fatal.

The preliminary investigation into the conspiracy charges preferred against the officers of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild was closed on Thursday, and the eight defendants committed for trial.

What The Senate Needs.

Toronto Telegram.

Canada's senate argues that it don't need reform. And it don't. Extinction is what it needs.

A Mild Suggestion.

Ottawa Free Press.

For instance, now that the imperial authorities are stirred up over the meat question, might they not consent to lift that cattle embargo? They might do it gently, so that no one would be disgraced.

He Must Be Careful.

Toronto Star.

When Premier Whitney tackles the assessment act next session he would do well not to interfere with the four great divisions of mankind—tax makers, tax eaters, tax payers, and tax dodgers.

Must Vote on These By-Laws. How is that?

William Laidlaw, of the Toronto Conservative Association, does not approve of the government's mining policy. He does not think any government can mine on its own account. Its scheme is nothing short of gambling. Oh, but it's a government that does things.

Last election the people of Winnipeg spent $600,000 on a gas plant. This month they sanction the expenditure of $3,500,000 on an electric plant. With local improvements added the civic debt will rise to $17,449,225. Verily, there is growth in Winnipeg in more senses than one.

Jerome for governor of New York. That's the latest. And, strange to say, he is boomed by some of the men who bitterly opposed him when a candidate for the district attorneyship. It's a sign of the times. The democrats are demoralized—and they would be dead with Hearst as a banner bearer.

The smart Yankee has had to send to Japan, to the imperial college at Tokio, for a man to tell them what was the matter with their buildings in San Francisco that so many collapsed in the earthquake. The Jap was equal to the emergency. He has suggested a method of construction that will make the buildings fire-proof and earthquake-proof.
