HE CAN IDENTIFY 'EM

SERGT. NESBITT IS SURE OF HIS MAN.

Can Pick Him Out if He is Among Those Arrested—One Italian Escaped While Being Brought Here—The Policemen Forgot Their Guns.

At 4.30 o'clock on Friday afternoon the twenty-second Italian, said to have been one of those taking part in Thursday's riot at the outer station, was locked-up in the police station. He was unable to speak English, but from his passport, found on him when searched at the police station by Police Constables Timmerman and McAdoo, who brought him in, it was found his name was Celestro Bucci. He had wound round his leg his finances, $10. His arrest was simple; curiosity drew him back to the box car—his home—and the apparent peacefulness proved a trap. He came to join his comrades. Detective James Harnott, who came up from Montreal with G.T.R. Detective McRae, was on the platform and immediately arrested the returned Italian.

The Italians arrested and remanded for a week's stay in jail will not likely all be convicted of taking part in the riot, for lack of evidence against them. "All coons look alike to me" would aptly apply to the reason for those present being unable to identify who actually took part in the fight against the constables.

Police Constable Naylon declares he can positively identify Vincenzo Delalla as one who was shooting and who chased them from the station platform to the cab, with a knife. He, of course, was followed by others, but Naylon is not so sure of the others. Delalla bears a cut over his eye.

Sergt. Nesbitt thinks he can identify the one most savage towards him and who inflicted the stab wound. He thinks he was a short man. Suspicion falls on Guiseppe Domofio, who bears a wound on his head received from a club.

During their stay in the county jail, awaiting the police court hearing, the men from the land by the blue Mediterranean waters will not likely be made to work. It has been suggested that when they leave there that the board of health go on a tour of inspection.

Word came to the city, late yesterday afternoon, that two Italians had been arrested in Brockville. They were to be brought to the city on the evening train. Police Constable Bateson met the constable from Brockville, but he had only one man. It is reported that the second man made a successful dash for liberty at Gananoque but confirmation of the rumor could not be obtained as the Brockville policeman failed to give any such information to Bateson.

Dago No. 23, to be arrested was Savano Moretto. He had in his possession $92.05.

Only forty of the striking Italians were taken down to Montreal. Seventy, who were willing to go to work again, went on the track yesterday.

Forgot Their Arms.

Many citizens have considered it foolhardy that three policemen should have attempted to quell the rioting of a mob of an hundred and not have a gun of any description. The question has arisen, "Is it a regulation that the police shall carry arms only after ten o'clock in the evening?" It is understood to be more of a custom than a fixed law, but the recent circumstances would seem to warrant the bobbies carrying more than their batons, in case of an emergency, such as Thursday's. Police Constable Naylon was asked why they (Sergt. Nesbitt, Police Constables McAdoo and himself) did not go on their trip to the outer station, armed.

"Well," he said, "we did decide to do that when the first call for three police came. But in the hurry of responding to the second call, it somehow slipped our attention and we were driven off before we thought."

It rises as an almost asserted fact, that there would surely have been a wholesale shooting affray had the constables had their firearms. They would have stood their ground and the fight would have continued. Perhaps as matters ended, it was as well circumstances were as they were. Hereafter, profiting from such an experience, it would seem the constables should carry pocket revolvers, night and day, to be ready for any call, with a degree of safety to themselves.

"They ought to have known better" critics have urged. But surely the local police can be upheld when the Montreal detectives, who are more or less accustomed to dealing with these navvies, under such occasions of discontent, should arrive on the scene unarmed. Here again the excuse is the moment of forgetfulness in the hurried excitement.

At The Police Court.

When Celestro Bucci and Savanna Moaro stood to answer the charge of rioting, in police court, this morning, they shook their heads and said "No English." Mr. Dinny, a local Italian, was in court to act as interpreter. He told them they would have to remain till next Friday.

Again came the head shake and shrug of shoulders. "Very sorry to be here; did not do anything; the rest did," was the interpretation.

"Tell them," said the court, "it will be all right if they tell all they know next week."

DOMINION DAY HYMN

To Be Sung in Kingston Churches To-Morrow.

God save our gracious King!
Long live our noble King!
God save the King!
Send him victorious,
Happy and glorious,
Long to reign over us—
God save the King!

Our loved Dominion bless
With peace and happiness;
Be Thou her light.
When the wild tempests rave,
Ruler of wind and wave!
Do Thou our country save
By Thy great might.

Hear, Lord, Thy Church's cry,
Quicken her from on high
To heed Thy call.
May she ne'er fail nor pause,
Speeding the Gospel's cause,
Till the world owns Thy laws,
God save us all!

The hymn to the most popular air in the empire was composed by Rev. R. S. Forneri, of Kingston, and will be sung in a number of churches tomorrow, having been ordered in quantity. Copies may be obtained for other churches by telephoning the Whig office.

Monday's Big Programme.

The programme arranged by the Oddfellows for their big picnic at Lake Ontario Park, Monday, is one that should prove a splendid attraction. At 2 p.m., the funny Oriental ball game will be put on, followed one hour later by the struggle between the Triple Linkers and the Young Irishmen, which promises to be the hottest ball game of the season. "A" battery band will play all afternoon in the grove. Between times races will be run off for the amusement of the rising generation. Angrove's large concert gramaphone will make the grove lively with the latest music. In the evening there will be a beautiful display of fireworks on the water opposite the park. The band will supply music for dancing at the close of the concert in the pavilion.

Joseph Not Secured.

The ballot box case has been resurrected. The two Hawkey brothers, Craig and Joseph, were in camp at Ottawa. There is apparently a warrant still out for the latter's appearance, and Lieut-Col. Sherwood, of the Dominion Police force, undertook to execute it but got Craig by mistake. In the meantime Joseph made himself scarce.

CASE FOR COMPANY

IN CONNECTION WITH PERTH ROAD ARBITRATION.

Is Now Complete—The Court Adjourned Until July 10th When the County Council's Side Will Be Heard.

When the arbitration board over the Kingston and Perth toll road met on Friday afternoon, J. L. Whiting, K.C., on behalf of the company, proceeded with his case.

The first witness called was Joseph Duff. He resides near Inverary, and has lived there all his life. He remembered when Mr. Fair took over the road. It was in very poor condition then. To-day it is a great deal better and is now a good road. The hills are fairly well graded. He would rather pay the tolls now than drive over the road free of charge as it was before Mr. Fair secured it.

Witness was then taken in hand by W. F. Nickle. He admitted that every spring a piece of the road, probably 150 yards in length, was flooded. This was near Harper's swamp. The road there was not in good condition and worn down to the logs in places. Would not sooner pay tolls than drive over the road free. It was certainly in a bad state of repair for about one-eighth of a mile. In the spring of the year, two waggons heavily loaded could not pass at the portion under question. If one got off the road, the chances are one would sink out of sight in the swamp. In regard to the hills they had not been "blinded" lately when fresh stone was spread. Did not know much about the culverts. The weeds were high in places and witness did not know whether they were cut each year or not. In places there were no good rails along the edge of the swamp land. Did not know much about roads or road-making.

In answer to Dr. Ryan, witness said certain of the swamp land was worth nothing. The best of the land through which the road passed had been selling for as high as $50 an acre. To buy a stretch of land through a man's farm would cost more than buying a corner. Witness thought it would cost about $100 to keep the road open in winter, unless the weather went to great extremes.

Thompson Hunter swore as follows: Resided one-half mile north of Inverary and had known the Perth road all his life. Road was in poor shape. Mr. Fair took it over, but had improved under his management till it was now a fair road. Would sooner drive the road to-day and pay toll than drive free as it was before Mr. Fair took it over. Cross-examined by T. J. Rigney, the witness said that the Perth road was as good as any he had driven over. There were fewer hills on the Storrington road than on the Perth. The land adjoining the former was higher than that adjoining the latter. Harper's swamp was worth something as pasture land, probably $25 a year. The whole road from end to end would average about $30 per acre. In answer to Dr. Ryan witness could not say what it would cost to keep the road open in winter. Had never seen more than ten inches of water on the road and it only stayed for about six days.

George Letherland, Latimer, testified that the road was a good deal better now than when Mr. Fair took it in charge. To Dr. Ryan witness said there was not as much traffic now as formerly, and hence the road was less valuable. Questioned by W. F. Nickle, witness thought the delapidated condition of Loughboro Lake bridge, would lessen traffic on the Perth road. More traffic was going around by Harrowsmith and Perth. Through Harper's swamp the road was wide enough in places for waggons to pass. Flanigan's hill was probably the best on the road and McCallum's the worst. Some of the hills were too narrow in the opinion of the witness. There were a number of grey heads along parts of the road. The land along the road is worth $40 to $50 per acre. The Perth road was better than the Sydenham road. In parts of the road the weeds were higher than they should be. Knew of the company putting on four or five men to open the road. At times the road was not fit for travel. Didn't think on an average the road could be kept open in winter for $100.

Major Ferguson knew the Perth road as he lived in Inverary. It was in a poor condition when Mr. Fair took it over, but owing to his management many improvements were made. The land it ran through was worth about $50 an acre. Near Harper's swamp, the road was very bad and remained so about six weeks in the spring.

James Sherman also thought the road had improved under Mr. Fair's management and would rather pay toll and drive it now than go over it free in the old condition. The swamp lands were assessed from nothing to $20 an acre.

Charles Hay, Glenburnie, has known the Perth toad for the past twenty years. It was not passable before Mr. Fair took it, but is now much better.

William Reid worked in improving the Perth road, and told of the hills he had graded, also describing the work. The road is one hundred per cent. better now than before Mr. Fair took it up.

John Reid, Sr., was next called and corroborated the former witness' testimony, as he had also worked on the road. The work in which he had been engaged was done when Mr. Fair first took over the road.

John Ferguson also gave evidence along the same line. He helped grade the hills. The road in his opinion was much better now than when Mr. Fair took it over.

John Lake worked on the road during the last year, gravelling and grading it. It is to-day much better than when Mr. Fair took it over.

This completed the case for the road company, and the court adjourned until Tuesday, July 10th at 2 p.m.

GIRL CATCHES A BURGLAR.

Takes £180 Worth of Stolen Jewels From His Pockets.

A servant girl told an unusually interesting story at Windsor, England, police court, how she caught and succored a burglar.

Her name is Kathleen Elizabeth Bartlett, and she is employed by Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Benyon. On Saturday she was left in charge of the house, but in the afternoon she went out for a few hours by permission.

When she returned between seven and eight o'clock in the evening, she heard footsteps in her mistress' bedroom, and immediately afterwards the sound of something heavy falling in the front garden. She went out and found a man named Meade lying on a flower bed. His explanation was that he was selling scissors, but as there was a necklace peeping out of one of his pockets, the girl was suspicious.

She accused him of having jumped from the window. He tried to limp away, and she caught hold of him, searched him and took from his pockets watches, bracelets, rings, and other articles of the value of £180.

Then she asked him if he was hurt. He said he had injured his knee. As he looked as if he was going to faint, she invited him into the house, told him to sit down and allowed him to rest for half an hour.

He told her he was a Roman Catholic, and she said she would take him to see a priest across the road if he would promise not to run away. He promised, and she conducted him to the priest's house, where she left him and then went for a policeman.

The magistrates committed Meade for trial, and commended the young woman.
