Too Big of Contract.

Hon. Thomas Watson, in his magazine, takes severely to task those who have presumed, and for political purposes, to take credit for the establishment of the Rural Free Delivery. Several persons have, as Mr. Watson avers, sought to pose as "father of the child," and he has run them down and managed to challenge them into silence.

The rural free delivery is, as Mr. Watson alleges, one of the greatest civilizers of the times. It certainly is a great convenience, and marks a progressiveness in national government which is to the credit of the United States government. The idea, originally, was modest. It was confined largely to certain districts where experiments at reasonable expense were in order. But in ten years the expansion of the business has been prodigious. Millions of dollars have been expended, and the cry is for more.

The deficit in the American postal service is appalling, and it is growing. What the end will be no one can conjecture. Hon. Thomas Watson is deluged, as he has good reason to be, with the experience he has had as a projector of the rural mail. He is too sensible a man, however, not to see that there is a limit to it and that this limit has been passed. If he could now call a halt in the business he would be doing a highly patriotic act.

Canada has this year a surplus of over a million dollars in connection with its postal service. It would have had a deficit of five millions had it accepted the suggestion of some people and indulged in the extravagance which rural free mail invites.

Watering The Milk.

The laboratory of the Inland Revenue Department has issued Bulletin No. 121, which deals with the analysis of whole milk, skim milk, butter-milk and cream. The department is showing commendable energy in the work of inspection. Perhaps the commendation which has followed certain exposures in the United States is to be credited with some of the reforms which are now aimed at. But pure food is after all so important that the government should spare no pains in order to see that it only is put on the market for sale. The adulterators dislike publicity, and rather than have it they will respect the law. But only when they cannot help themselves. So many men, for some reason, will do questionable things in the pushing of trade, if they find that it pays.

Over three hundred samples of milk were submitted to the Inland Revenue department for its study. They were collected from various parts of the dominion—from Prince Edward Island on the east to British Columbia on the west. Of the total 180 were found to be genuine, 83 doubtful, and 45 adulterated. Kingston's contribution showed up thus: Genuine, 9; doubtful, 12; adulterated, 2. Names of vendors are given in the Bulletin. Those who had the "genuine" or "adulterated" article can stand the examination of the record with pride; those who had milk "partly skimmed" or "under average in total solids," or "under average in cream," "adulterated with water," must read the comments of the analyst with some confusion and shamefacedness.

Let us have more of this kind of thing, this unparing and truthful and candid statement of the facts, and there will be a complete reform in the business. The vendor of milk, expecting popular support, cannot look for any favour and be advertised as an impostor.

The Evil Of The Deal.

The Healey Falls case is not made acceptable because it may appear that the local municipalities have an interest in it, or that Brighton, which linked, has been modified. The world sent a man to Cobourg to measure public sentiment, and he found the people eager for the development by the Northumberland-Durham company and some of its members appear to be liberals.

The fact that liberals and liberal papers have endorsed the deal does not make much difference. The Toronto News finds in any case, even now, that the terms of the franchise are not proper, that in extending the time during which it holds beyond the regulations of the department a special privilege was granted. This implies favoritism, and "favoritism in government business is wrong," says the News with emphasis.

In addition the government undertakes by a special agreement, to regulate or adjust the rates for power, and this involves a reflection on the Hydro-Electric commission. One of two conclusions follows, in the opinion of the Toronto News, "either that official confidence in the commission is gone, or else that in the particular instance before us the government has some cheap political interest to serve by retaining the power to review rates."

The Toronto World holds that the Hydro-Electric commission cannot be ignored, and that if necessary the legislature can pass an act and by it give the commission control of all the water powers in the province. At the same time it is bound to remark that the contract as it stands "tends to cast doubt on the sincerity of the members of the cabinet," and besides it was not a shrewd move to do anything to disturb the confidence of the people. Meanwhile the Mail is jubilant over the explosion of the scandal. The Mail may deceive its party readers, but it will not deceive the public.

Editorial Notes.

There is some agitation for telegraph ownership in the United States. There is more sense in this than in the ownership of railways.

The people may be fooled with some promises, but not always. Performance is more satisfactory. The local government will realize this presently.

The Yorkshire Post does not encourage the strengthening of England's love for the colonies. It is to be hoped the Post speaks only for itself and not for the people of Yorkshire.

The premier, on reaching Toronto, said he was glad he was back in God's country. England is not, then, within the realm especially under divine favour.

The labor vote has scared the republicans in Maine. Gompers went in pursuit of the congressmen who voted against labour in the last house and nearly defeated him.

Mr. Whitney is quite philosophical when he says that if the government has gone contrary to their expressed intentions on the power question it must suffer. It surely will.

THE RURAL PHILOSOPHER.

His Ideas of the Microscope's Powers.

The following is related of a rural philosopher who was somewhat advanced in years without learning much of the mysteries of nature. What knowledge the old gentleman had gleaned was entirely independent of science. He did not know whether a microscope was "something to eat" or a new-fangled farming machine.

A young friend, fresh from school, took him a visit, and was very anxious to exhibit to the old man on the wonders of the microscope, a specimen of which he carried about him. While the old philosopher was making a frugal meal in the field at noon the youth produced his microscope and explained its operation, which he illustrated by exhibiting its power upon several bugs and divers minute atoms of animal matter at hand.

Mr. Cochrane declares that the hydro-electric commission was not ignored in the disposal of the Healey Falls case. Mr. Cochrane is right. Far from being ignored, the commission was hit on the head with an axe.

Doesn't He?

The Toronto School agreement has arrived, but the money to pay for the site did not accompany it. It may have been an oversight, Mr. Callaghan, what think you? Surely Whitney doesn't expect you to purchase it!

A Big Success. The new intermzzo, two-step by C. S. Johnston, is going to be the great musical hit of the season. It is the first and only legitimate successor to Hiawatha, whose popularity it bids fair to equal, if not excel. The title page is a work of art, being a reproduction of a very celebrated German painting. The music is very bright and there is nothing in the whole composition that remind you of anything you have ever heard. "Iola" was positively the greatest success featured by the 15th band during their last concert in Macdonald park. For one day only, Thursday, September 13th, you may procure this two-step at fifteen cents per copy at McEwen Bros.

TRAGIC HEROISM

What a Little Lad Did For His Mother.

Start Moments. Mrs. Booth tells a story of a little boy of the London slums, whose parents were very poor, his father, in fact, was dead, and his mother had washed herself to a shadow over the wash tub in an endeavor to keep her children together. The little boy had heard how the publishers of a certain paper had advertised that anyone who was accidentally killed while carrying a copy of their paper in his pocket would be protected, in that his nearest relative would receive the sum of $5,000. A new form of life insurance, you see.

The next day after he had read this the little boy was seen to throw himself beneath the wheels of a cab, which crushed his head and killed him. The policeman who ran to pick him up searched his pockets for some scrap of writing to tell who the little fellow was, and he found a copy of the paper referred to and a note in a childish scrawl which said:

"I have given five 'tousand' plunks to me murtherer she works so hard," and following this was his address. When the policeman had read the scrawl and realized its significance he cried and sobbed like a baby. Through the little boy's act charitable people were interested and they saw that the mother and the little brothers and sisters were placed beyond want. The policeman was wrong, for a mother would rather have her little boy than all the money in the world, but he had the courage to do what he thought was right and his act was an act of unselfish heroism. He had said.

PLAYS BABY ACT

And He Does It With Decided Skill.

EDWARD GARRATT. New York, Sept. 12.—Although seven years old Edward Garratt now plays the part of a fourteen months old baby in "The Little Stranger," so exceedingly well, that the audience at the Haymarket theatre in New York are no little surprised. Garratt is a midgit and only thirty-seven inches tall. He is an exceedingly clever actor.

A FRENCH DUEL.

Expert Ralls at Duels With Pistols.

New York Post. Apropos of the recent Andre-Negrier duel, the Paris Figaro sought the views of a man who had the reputation of an expert on the field of honor. He at once began to rail at duels with pistols. He could not bear even to speak of them. The fact was that he had once himself, at an encounter of that kind, received a ball in his shoulder.

Then you disapprove of them simply because you were defeated?" "Why, I was not defeated."

"No, I was a second! You may well believe that I promised myself never to mix again in the affairs of that sort. However, one day I had to accompany a friend on the field. He had asked it of me as a personal favor; I could not refuse, but I insisted upon one condition."

"What was that?" "I should climb a tree during the firing."

"A good scheme?" "You think so? Well, I was wounded again; my friend fired in the air!"

TWO BRAVE MEN.

How the Duke and Laborite Met.

Bristol Times and Mirror. William Crooks tells this incident of his adventures at a fashionable reception on an evening dress. He passed the policeman with difficulty, and became on his entrance into the brilliantly-lighted hall, the cynosure of all eyes. In fact, it was a great occasion for the laborite. Nobody spoke to him, and he wandered round the rooms, alone, looking at the pictures and braving it out. Presently who should be announced but his grace the Duke of Norfolk. He saw what was going forward, and walked straight across the nearly empty floor to where William Crooks was standing. "Mr. Crooks," he said, "have you found your way to the supper room? Come and let us have a cup of coffee together." And duke and laborite never spent the best part of the evening together.

Tories Claim Everything.

Hamilton Times.

Has anyone heard of a liberal being appointed to office by the Whitney government?—Kingston Whig.

It hasn't been necessary as yet. Nor will it be until the ranks of qualified conservatives, willing to accept office, have been thinned to a cipher point.—Spectator.

And yet the Tories marvel that Kingston liberals object to the Ottawa government passing over well-qualified men of their own party and going abroad to find Tories to appoint to good offices.

Woman's Kidney Troubles

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is Especially Successful in Curing This Fatal Disease.

Of all the diseases known, with which women are afflicted, chronic kidney disease is the most fatal. In fact, unless early and correct treatment is applied, the weary patient seldom survives.

Being fully aware of this, Lydia E. Pinkham, early in her career, gave exhaustive study to the subject, and in producing her great remedy for a woman's ills—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—was careful to see that it contained the correct combination of herbs which was sure to control that fatal disease, woman's kidney troubles.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the only one especially prepared for women, and thousands have been cured of serious kidney derangements by it. Derangements of the feminine organs quickly affect the kidneys, and when a woman has such symptoms as pain or weight in the loins, backache, bearing-down pains, scalding or burning sensations or deposits in the urine, unusual thirst, swelling of hands and feet, swelling under the eyes or sharp pains in the back running through the groin, she may infer that her kidneys are affected and should lose no time in combating the disease with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the woman's remedy for woman's ills.

The following letters show how marvelously successful it is.

Mrs. Samuel Frake, of Prospect Plains, N. J., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham—

"I cannot thank you enough for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; a Woman's Remedy for Woman's ills.
