Take Care of Your Stomach and You Will Escape No End of Trouble.

We can't abuse the stomach without paying a penalty. This penalty is most frequently indigestion, with all its accompanying ailments. But the right kind of food and you will not suffer.

The right kind of food is a natural food, whole wheat food, Malt-Vita, the most delicious, the most satisfying, the most nutritious, and the most necessary for the sustenance and upbuilding of the body and the brain.

A perfect breakfast is impossible without Malt-Vita. Being a pure grain product it is rich in food elements—all the food elements of the best white wheat grown and the best barley malt extract—intensely vitalizing and easy for even the weakest stomach to digest.

"I had been a sufferer from nervous debility and indigestion for several years, without any benefit or relief from various tonics and other medical prescriptions. Imagine my surprise when, a short time after beginning the use of Malt-Vita, I became aware of the beneficial effects of my long-standing ailment."—E. Gardner, Barre, Vt.

All grocers sell Malt-Vita. Try some with milk or fruit. You never tasted anything so good and you will be glad we told you about it. Ready to eat. Now to eat.

Scandalized The People.

The magistrate who tried the liquor case in East Elgin which had such a political significance made a speech which the circumstances did not call for. He seemed to say that the absence of licensed hotels had occasioned the resort of the young people to "unlicensed hawdy houses."

The imputation rested upon two experiences, which the magistrate said proceeded to rectify. He had seen from ten to thirty rigs outside of unlicensed places, and he assumed that these had been occupied by persons who were gadding about on immoral business. He had been canvassed by one parent to interfere in a case because the man's son was apparently being led astray.

There may be some ground for suspicion against certain resorts, that their attractions were not of a healthy or delectable kind, but the speech of a magistrate, and especially his reflections on the temperance and church-going people, was not appreciated. The reference to the Almighty and His judgment savoured of profanity.

The justices of the peace or magistrates appointed by the Whitney government may think that they should imitate their political master and talk sternly or loudly about every passing event, but recedence suggested to the man in question that in trying a case under the liquor law it was not bounden on him to scandalize without evidence, the people of a township.

Hearst By His Editor.

When there is a general repudiation of William Randolph Hearst, on the part of the press, when he is held up as the representative of "yellowism," which generally means all that is disreputable in public or journalistic life, it is refreshing to read the paragraph of a friendly pen.

Arthur Brisbane is the editor of the New York Journal, and has been since 1897. He is one of the most brilliant, as well as most prolific of writers, and is credited with a daily performance of service which is phenomenal in its character. He is the intellectual force behind the multi-millionaire. He is credited by some with being the originator of all the schemes which keep Hearst before the people.

Naturally Mr. Brisbane is most laudatory in opinions. He describes Mr. Hearst as a big man, in stature, as a man of great nervous as well as physical strength, a good listener, a person of few words. He is enterprising, owns nine newspapers, as well as various periodicals, a million acres of land, farms and houses and mines. He is a great employer of labor, and expends annually in the direction of his varied interests about fifteen millions of dollars. He will have no alliance, it is said, with other employers and has excited the hostility of his contemporaries by paying for things more liberally than they.

Finally he neither smokes nor drinks, has no fondness for the dissipations which attend wealth generally, and possesses the qualities that make for success. Mr. Brisbane is quite satisfied that he will make his mark in politics as he has in journalism. "There is no doubt, that he will be elected president of the United States if he lives," as "he is the most popular individual in the nation to-day."

His editor concludes by saying that "many men will be ashamed of the slanders invented or circulated concerning Hearst." On reading which one is forced to the conclusion that he must be shockingly bad or shockingly misrepresented.

The editor of the North American Review does not agree with Mr. Brisbane and presents this as a set off to the paragraph on Hearst:

"As a journalist, though keen, enterprising, and resourceful, he is a burning disgrace to the craft; as a politician, though shrewd and at times even sagacious, he is no more scrupulous than the basest of those whom he has stigmatized as criminals; as a partisan, though earnest and efficient in appealing to the masses, he is a traitor; as an office-holder, he is prominent in shameful neglect of his duties; as an agitator, his delight consists in revelling in the incitement of evil passions; as a dual personality, though possessed of many engaging qualities, he is so utterly devoid of character, so unsympathetic in even his own recklessness, so faithless to his professed ideals, so scornfully disregarding of moral responsibility, so addicted to delectable practices in efforts to gratify his ambitions, so sinfully persistent in stirring the caldron of discontent, envy, and hatred, as to be a living and glaring reproach to American civilization."

What an arraignment! What a contrast with the Brisbane epithet!

It is as difficult to find a friend as it is to lose an enemy.

Grafting in Parliament.

A powerful arraignment against the United States senate was indicted a year or so ago. It was from the pen of one who had studied the intimate relation of its members with some of the great corporations and their utter subservience to private interests. The impression one got of permanent senators, of men who were very much in evidence and regarded as strong in the councils of the nation, was that public interests and public policy were at right angles until they came between the moated men and their plans, and then there was a cringing that was pitiable to behold.

From the American senate the scene is shifted to the Canadian commons, in which all and labour some men whose political relations are not the most honorable. The muck rake which is represented by judicial enquiry and royal commission has brought about some painful revelations. Corruption has been asserted, corruption on a wholesale scale, and the party press for a re-orientation of the member whose election has been affected by it. But the purchase of venal votes is of small import compared with the grafting of members in parliament.

The fact that some members of the commons, while engaged in a political tour of the North-West with the leader of the opposition, saw the chance for money-making and used their position and influence to further their personal needs in the rankst of all scandals. The story that has been told by witnesses before the royal commission, and principally by Mr. Lefargy, of what was done through the Union Trust company, and with the money of the I.O.F., is such that the usefulness of certain persons is gone. Mr. Pope and Mr. McMillivray are ex-members of parliament, and it is well. Mr. Foster, Mr. Fowler and Mr. Lefargy have obscured their future and made it necessary that they should disappear from the house.

The mischief with Canadian political life is this: That too many enter it who have not the means to meet their wants. The indemnity is only meant to cover the sessional expenses, not to compensate the members for their labours. Those who cannot afford to serve without reward are subject to the temptations before which some have fallen flat. Nor can the situation be readily changed. In this young country, most men are in the strenuous services. Those sent to parliament are characteristic of the whole—a few wealthy and independent, but most of them sharing their time between public and private services. The fall of any one under these circumstances is to be regretted, but grafting in parliament cannot be tolerated.

Editorial Notes.

The hospital is not prospering through the strife among the members of the board.

Has Bob Birmingham really resigned from the Ontario colonization office? That is what some people would like to know.

The World is panting for a new party. Mr. Maclean has suggested it several times. Why does he not proceed to organize it?

A good deal of the political news which appears in the Montreal Gazette is gathered from the rine line, which accounts for its doubtful condition.

If ear marks are wanted of political profligacy in London, they can be found in the federal records of 1892 and 1896. Where was Jerry Collins then?

R. L. Borden, the leader of the opposition, admits that he was invited to join in the Fowler-Pope land speculation and declined. Lucky man. Will he ask the grafters to resign?

The provincial colonization office must be an important one when it can be closed indefinitely while Bob Birmingham goes out as a party organizer.

The English labour party's whip is surprised to find labour organizations in Ontario, the hot-bed of imperialism, paying tribute to American management. Is Canada not able to manage and support its own labour parties?

Yes, Mr. Spectator, the Whig did object to the appointment of a Tory in preference to a Liberal and for a new office created by a Liberal government. The militia council at Ottawa is Tory, however, and it has no use for Liberals.

The Globe sees a close connection between the grafter in parliament and the bootler in the ward. The grafting gentlemen from the commons and the bootler scamp from the back street row in the same boat. They certainly do.

It is leaking out that the political scheming to get a nomination for Mr. Knight in North Toronto was not all straight. There is some talk, and some of these days there may be an explosion. Perhaps the attorney-general will investigate it.

Roussas is the William Maclean of Quebec. He is a very superior person, and has decided, it is announced, to lead an independent party. The Bourassa party is composed of Mr. Lavergne and himself. The Maclean party is composed of one.

The revenue of the Imperial parliament in succession during this year is estimated at $62,000,000. If Matheson only had a wind-fall like that for a couple of years how happy he would be. Robbing the people? He thought that once, but it was when he was in opposition.

The Toronto News doubts the premier's earnestness when he thunders against carelessness in political places. Before he can succeed the News says he will be "compelled to conduct revival services over certain partisan-conservative members of the legislature whose influence just now is fairly strong."

D. D. Mann and Sir Thomas Shaughnessy were the friends of the parliamentary grafters. One gave them the route of the Canadian Northern in secret, and the other says them "the best that was going" in unoccupied lands. For these favours what did the parliamentarians promise? What can they give in return?

SYDNEY'S CANADIAN HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Any one desiring to acquire a section of land in the local Home-Steading Act, or to reserve, may be interested in the following regulations:

Application for homestead sections must be made in person at the office of the Surveyor-General.

An application for entry must be made personally at any time before the local Home-Steading Act, at the expense of the applicant, and if the land is vacant on receipt of the application it is to have priority over all other applications received by mail.

In case of "persecution" to be summarily cancelled and the land will be held until the applicant has been notified by mail.

An applicant for inspection of a section must be a Canadian citizen, and if the land is vacant on receipt of the application it is to have priority over all other applications received by mail.

A homesteader whose entry is cancelled or whose entry is subject to appeal of fact or law, or if the land is not eligible, but to no one else, shall be liable to the same conditions as a homesteader.

Where an entry is summarily cancelled or where an application for inspection is refused, the applicant for inspection may voluntarily abandon the application for inspection and re-apply for inspection at a later date.

Where an entry is summarily cancelled or where an application for inspection is refused, the applicant for inspection may voluntarily abandon the application for inspection and re-apply for inspection at a later date.

The following plans—

(1) At least six months residence and cultivation of the land during the term of the application.

(2) If the father or mother of the applicant is deceased, a certificate upon a farm in the name of the applicant, or a certificate upon a farm in the name of the father or mother.

(3) If the applicant has his residence upon farming land in the vicinity of the land, the applicant must give six months residence upon the land in question.
