Told in the Twilight

A most pleasant affair was Mrs. Thomas Donnelly's tea, at her place at home, University avenue, yesterday afternoon, when people had an opportunity of meeting that very charming stranger within our gates, Mrs. S. L. Walker of Hamilton, Bermuda. The guest of honor received with her hostess. The drawing-room was massed with palms and with flowers brightening it. In the bay window an orchestra was national, and the sweetest and liveliest of music added the touch of gaiety which only strings of instruments can give. So pleasant was it, that in the drawing-room that it needed Mrs. William Gill to remind people that there were tea and iced in the dining-room, and to guide them to the single candle light, in a smilax-twined chandelier, made the room softly bright. At the table, pouring coffee was Mrs. John Elliott, and before her was a four-branched candlestick, standing on a silver mirror, the candles shaded with green. Her colleague, Mrs. John Donnelly, who made the tea, was lighted at her work by a contemporary candlestick upon a mirror, its light shaded with pink. The central arrangement made the looker-on covetous, for there, in a tall crystal vase were long stemmed roses of the most delicate pink, swinging and drooping their heads among lace fern. Over in a corner little Mrs. S. B. Simpson cut the ice by the glow of a single candle held by a silver candlestick, which stood in folds of pale green silk, with pink roses laid carefully upon it. Visitors had another welcome from Miss Ruby Donnelly, who was chief of the tea-room staff, and the others helping were Miss Anna Elliott, Miss May Wormwith, Miss Florence Penick, Miss Mabel Lewis, and Miss Ruby Gillie. The baby of the house sometimes honored the people in the drawing-room with his presence, and again chose to bestow his favours in the hall. Whoever he was he was centre of attraction. Mrs. Walker will receive with Mrs. Donnelly on Tuesday and Thursday of the week after next on Tuesday of this coming week.
