Election in Retiree.

North Retiree has elected as its representative in the Commons Gerald White, son of the late Hon. Peter White, who was for a long time in public life and speaker of the house. This result has been anticipated since nomination day. There were two liberals in the field, and they fought each other furiously. Mr. Murray was not the ideal candidate. He was a political wallflower. He wanted to represent both conservatives and liberals, and at one time made an appeal for their support.

The opposition of Mr. White cured him of the idea that all chances were equal for him. The situation suggested his withdrawal or the withdrawal of Dr. McKay, who took the field as the choice of the element in the liberal party, who refused to follow Mr. Murray. Some men, who force themselves on the people, need cheering, and Mr. Murray has received it, but would the same result have been served by Dr. McKay remaining out of the contest?

Why should two liberals quarrel and give the advantage to the enemy? The conservative party will hail the result as a great victory for the platform which Mr. Borden laid down during his visit to the constituency. But it is simply the triumph of an organized party over a disorganized party, and the constituency can reject its follies at leisure.

Great Nar Laid Aside.

A nephew of Mr. Chamberlain, now travelling in Canada, intimates that the great tribune is not suffering, as reported, from paralysis, but from a severe attack of gout. "Severe" may be the proper word and descriptive of a condition which has incapacitated Mr. Chamberlain, as he has not been before, and to the serious detriment of his political plans.

Mr. Chamberlain is not an old man, when compared with Gladstone, and some others who have mightily influenced public opinion in England. But he has been always a busy man and has put into the public service, to which he has been devoted, an energy which has cost him something. He could afford now to rest and contemplate his accomplishments. The record is very much to his credit. All the things he aimed to do were not successful, but his triumphs were many, and they will be perpetuated in the history of the nation.

The great ambition of all, greater than any that has moved him heretofore, has been to reconstruct the fiscal policy of England. He may be deluding himself and others, but he is enthusiastic in his championship of a new idea, and if he had physical power at all equal to his will power he would make a heroic fight for popularity during the next four or five years. He is England's foremost debater, the man who charms the people by his speech whether he convinces them or not.

His untimely for active campaigning now is a sore disappointment to his friends. It will be tolerable if he emerges later from retreat to take up the work he has temporarily laid down, but the suspicion is that he is laid aside by something more serious than an attack of gout.

Borden Splitting Hairs.

Mr. Borden, the leader of the opposition, has made a declaration with regard to the land speculation which have brought some of his associates into unpleasant notoriety. It is—and he has emphasized it by repetition—that he "never had the slightest interest in, or connection with, the purchase of these lands." The evidence of Mr. Lefebvre leads to a somewhat different conclusion. Likewise the letter which Mr. Fowler wrote to "My dear Lefebvre."

The deal was conceived during the trip of Mr. Borden and his friends through the North-West during the summer or early fall of 1902. The matter was talked over by the party and Mr. Lefebvre, in his evidence, said he believed that Mr. Borden expressed a willingness to join in the speculation. There was nothing "definite" about the understanding, but "when we got back east," said Mr. Lefebvre, "we would see what lands could be had from the C.P.R."

Later Mr. Fowler wrote the famous speech to Mr. Lefebvre, in which he told about Mr. Mann giving them the route of the Canadian Northern. The letter of Mr. Fowler said the information was for "Bennett, Borden and yourself," and Mr. Lefebvre admitted to the commission that he had understood "Borden had come in."

PROUD OF THE DOG

WHAT ONE BULL DOG DID FOR THE BABY.

He Saved it From a Cyclone, and Its Mother With it—No Limit to a Dog's Intelligence.

Detroit, Oct. 9.—An occasional visitor to Detroit is C. W. Higgins, of Omaha, who is here now on a business trip. Mr. Higgins is fond of animals, and never misses an opportunity to say something good about them. "No one," said he, "can set a limit to their intelligence, and sometimes they manifest it in a way that is astonishing.

"A friend of mine named Roberts moved into the extreme western part of Kansas in a region where cyclones are frequent. His nearest neighbors were twenty miles away and his family was composed of his wife and a little three-year-old daughter.

"When the lady was lying in bed and a bull puppy, which grew up with her and as the child had no playmates it made her both a reliable watchdog and a very playful and faithful companion. 'Spot,' as they called the dog, was very gentle and peaceful, and perfectly kind to everyone, especially the baby, whom he adored.

"In the summer of the year that my friend took up his ranch he was obliged, one hot July day, to leave home for a trip to the nearest town. The heat for some days had been most oppressive and this day the atmosphere was like a brazen furnace. Roberts had dug a cyclone cellar near the house and told his wife to run to it in case of a storm. She cautioned her to go to the cellar near the house, where she was playing with the dog.

"Mrs. Roberts went about her work in the morning and noticed that the baby had run away with the dog, and on going out of the door she found the animal tugging hard at her skirt. The little one was crying and protesting, but the dog was steadily dragging her toward a dry creek bed across the field, where he was fond of scratching.

"Mrs. Roberts told the dog to let go of the baby, but he paid no attention, growing furiously at her when she came near. She was following the dog looked up, and far across the plains saw a black cloud bearing swiftly down on the farm.

"When the storm had passed she crawled out of the hole with the baby and the dog, all unharmed. She found both barn and house swept away, while the cyclone cellar had been utterly wrecked. Had she been in it she would assuredly have been killed. When Roberts returned home that night and found his family safe you can believe he was thankful.

GREAT BRITAIN ISOLATED
At International Wireless Telegraph Meeting.
London, Oct. 10.—The Berlin correspondent of the 'Daily Mail' reports sensational developments at the international wireless telegraph conference. He says Great Britain is practically isolated. There is a split among the British delegates, while both Japan and France have deserted her. Italy thus far has given any indication of supporting the British opposition to Germany's proposal for an interchange of communication by all systems.

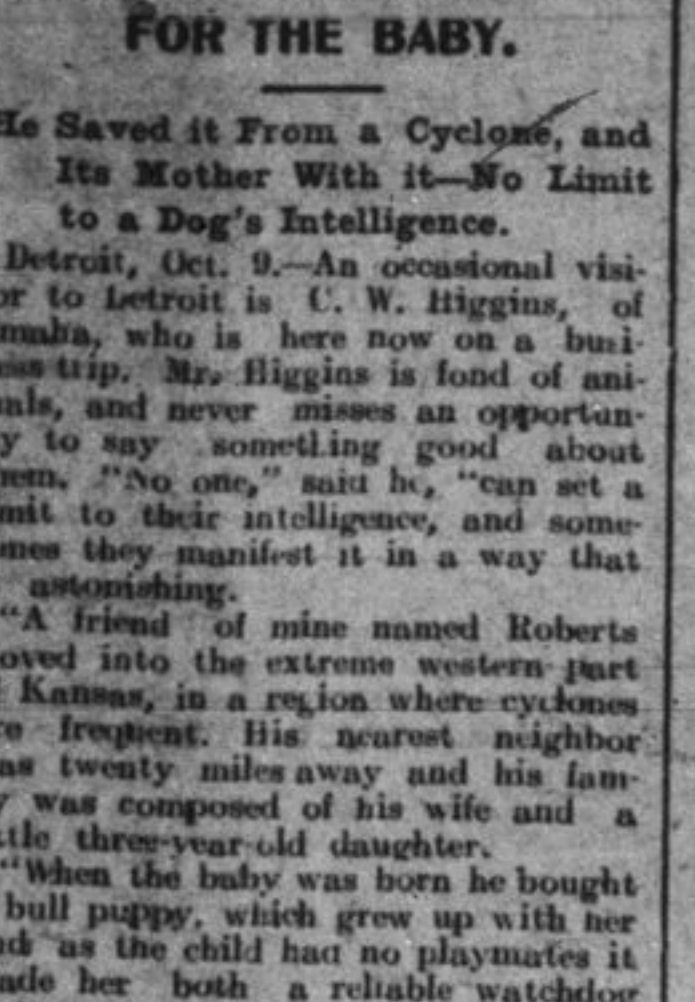

Jumping With Nerve Pain.
That's how you feel with neuralgia. But why lie awake at night, or crumple or complain. Get busy with a bottle of Nervine. It does not act like magic. It soothes the pain and destroys it. Harshness and certain, instant relief. Nothing is so popular as Nervine for aches and pains of all kinds. Try it for lumbago, toothache, rheumatism, neuralgia, pleurisy or colds. You'll soon acknowledge that Polson's Nervine beats them all. Sold everywhere in large 25-cent bottles.

ITALIAN ACTRESS.

She Passed Away on Tuesday Morning.

ADELAIDE RISTORI.
Rome, Oct. 9.—The Marchesi Del Grillo, better known as Adelaide Ristori, the celebrated Italian actress, died yesterday of pneumonia.

Adelaide Ristori was born in 1821. She was the daughter of obscure mechanics, who caused her to appear on the stage when she was twelve months old. At four years of age she played the children's roles, and when twelve years old played soprano and ingenue parts. She made rapid progress in her chosen profession, and in 1847 married the young Marquis Capranica Del Grillo. In 1855 she took Paris by storm.

AT THE PARK.

Improvements and Repairs Being Made.

Thousand Island Park, Oct. 9.—The new cement walk building from the steamboat wharf to the New Well-being is well under way and will be completed soon. A new oil engine is being installed in the electric light plant to be used to give power for lights for the hotels when the large engine is not running. An addition to the light plant will be needed to accommodate it, considerable repairs being done here this fall. The Ladies' Aid gave a supper at the residence of Mrs. McLaughlin, 1000 Bay Street, on Friday evening and a goodly sum was realized.

The heavy rain of Saturday did hundreds of dollars worth of good through this locality. The water in the river is still lowering. Duck hunters are kept busy late and early just now. The hunting shop will be kept open until the first of November. The park store will be kept open all winter. Quite a number from this locality took in the excursion to New York. The Islander is making two trips daily between Alexandria Bay and Clayton. Mrs. Hutchinson, Miss Kemp, Mr. and Mrs. Willis, are visiting friends on Wolfe Island.

MIDDLE LIFE

A Time When Women Are Susceptible to Many Dread Diseases—Intelligent Women Prepare for It—Two Relate Their Experiences.

The "change of life" is the most critical period of a woman's existence, and the anxiety felt by women as it draws near is not without reason.

Every woman who neglects the care of her health at this time invites disease and pain.

When her system is in a deranged condition, or she is predisposed to apoplexy, or congestion of any organ, the tendency is at this period likely to become active—and with a host of nervous irritations, make life a burden. At this time, also, cancer and tumors are more likely to form and begin their destructive work.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, back-aches, dizziness, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness, inquietude, and dizziness are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was prepared to meet the needs of woman's system at this trying period of her life. It invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system.

For special advice regarding this important period women are invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., and it will be furnished absolutely free of charge. The present Mrs. Pinkham is the daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, her assistant before her decease, and for twenty-five years since her advice has been freely given to sick women.

Read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound did for Mrs. Powless and Mrs. Mann:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

I took it for five months and then off on until the critical period had passed, and it restored me to perfect health. My advice to suffering women is to try your Vegetable Compound, and they will not be disappointed.—Mrs. E. Powless, Deseronto, Ont.

Another Woman's Case.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"As I owe my splendid health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I am very pleased to write and tell you of my friends with it. I am the mother of three children grown to womanhood, and have safely passed the change of life, and have young and as strong as I did twenty years ago, and I know that this is all due to your woman's friend, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I used it before my first change of life, and it greatly assisted nature and saved me much pain during the change of life. I took it off and on, for four years, and had but little trouble and sickness that most women have to endure."

—Mrs. James K. Mann, 833 Bathurst St., Toronto, Canada.

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Powless and Mrs. Mann, it will do for other women at this time of life.

It has conquered pain, restored health, and prolonged life in cases that utterly baffled physicians.
