A LAND QUESTION

KEPT EAR OF COURT THIS MORNING.

Defendants Accused of Unlawfully Cutting Timber—Testimony Regarding a Will Given—The Case Involves Several Relations.

The first case taken up was that of Wesley and Mary Johnson, executors of the late Lymon Johnson, deceased, and Wesley Johnson vs. Henry Johnson. Plaintiff's claim is for damages for wrongfully entering the plaintiff's land and cutting down timber, and carrying some away therefrom, said land being lot 25, 10th concession of Loughboro, and for an injunction to restrain the defendant from doing so.

Defendant pleads gift of land in question by deceased father, and counter claims to have the will set aside on account of undue influence.

William Munsell, with John L. Whiting, K.C., appeared for the plaintiffs, and T. L. Snook and John McHugh, K.C., for the defendant. J. S. R. McCann was the first witness called. He said that he had drawn up the will of deceased four years ago. Deceased's daughter had told him what was wanted in the will. Witness did not read the will to deceased, but had told him its contents, and he had agreed to all.

James Hurst, who was a witness to the will, gave evidence. He had heard the will read by Mr. McCann, in the presence of Mr. Johnson, Sr., and the latter appeared to be satisfied with it.

Dr. Isaac Wood testified that he had attended the late Lymon Johnson during his illness. He said that the first time he had been called, on November 10th, he appeared to be of sound mind, but that when he visited him on November 12th he appeared to be sinking.

Wesley Johnson, one of the plaintiffs, was next called. To Mr. Whiting he stated that he was one of the executors of the last will of Lymon Johnson. The mental condition of his father appeared all right on the day his father's will had been drawn, but had talked to his father and his conversation would go to show that he was of sound mind.

"Did Henry Johnson cut timber of the land after the will was drawn up?" asked Mr. Whiting.

"Yes, he cut timber in different places," said the witness.

"When would you estimate the damage at?"

"I would say about $100."

"Did you speak to Henry about the cutting of timber?"

"Yes, I spoke to him, and he said he would not stop cutting the timber."

Henry Johnson, the defendant, swore that he was forty-nine years of age and was married in 1879. Before he was married he had worked out, and had given his father money.

After he was married he lived in a house on the north side of the road. He had intended moving to Spaulfordville, but his father had asked him to go and live with him. In order to do this he had to cut some timber, and he had had cutting timber ever since.

Witness said that Wesley Johnson had interfered with him.

"He used to chase my children and throw stones at them," he said.

"There was a party on the south side of the road, and one day Wesley threatened to shoot me if I went that way."

The witness was on the stand when the court adjourned for luncheon, shortly after one o'clock.

SAVE FORT HENRY

ANCIENT PLACE HANDLED RUTHLESSLY BY TIME.

Kingston Only Custodian of Grand Old Fort—It Belongs to Canada, and Government Should Repair It.

Kingston, Oct. 12.—(To the Editor): An absence of twenty years from the Limestone City, I return to find that the hand of time has been directed ruthlessly against one of the few historical landmarks that Canada possesses, viz., Fort Henry. The changes in this respect, though ancient and discarded pieces of masonry are almost beyond belief, and it only remains for me to protest and urge the Government to protect and repair the damage done, so that it will be nothing but a mass of displaced limestone slabs.

cannot go into the details of the extent of the damage already done, but a cursory glance will reveal the enormous havoc already done, and it behooves the people of Canada to protect and repair the damage done, so that it will be nothing but a mass of displaced limestone slabs.

I should say that there should be voted immediately an appropriation of $25,000 to replenish the downfall of Fort Henry, and make good her waste. This should be done at once. It will ultimately be done there is no doubt, but every year will make the cost greater in proportion than it would be now.

If parliament could not be induced to undertake its immediate repair perhaps the authorities should open up a voluntary subscription list, and donate a squad of prisoners from the Central prison to protect and repair the loss of her walls.

Kingston is only the guardian of this fine old structure. It belongs to Canada as a whole, and the authorities, in my mind, are very culpable and negligent in their duties to allow the place to go to wreck and ruin. I am sure every loyal Canadian, did he know the extent of the damage already done, and the greater danger threatened, would join with me in indignation that the authorities did not maintain and preserve it in proper condition for the succeeding generations.—CANADIAN.

IRVING IN NEW YORK

The Son of Sir Henry Achieves a Marked Success.

New York, Oct. 16.—H. B. Irving achieved the real triumph of his first American engagement at the New Amsterdam Theatre, last evening, when he acted in Charles Reade's "The Lyons Mail." It was the actual test of his superb powers as an actor and the occasion when he met the crucial and inevitable comparison drawn between his father's genius and his own abilities, and he emerged brilliantly from the ordeal.

It might be truly said that the occasion was a memorable one dramatically. It was young Irving's first appearance in a play that for several generations has been associated with his father's most conspicuous triumphs. It is nearly thirty years since Sir Henry Irving first played the parts of Lear and Hamlet in Charles Reade's version of "Le Courrier de Lyon."

The consensus of critical opinion on H. B. Irving's conception and acting of the characters is to the effect that the actor has shown a maturity and mastery of detail his performance in every way merited comparison with that of his father's. It was hard to imagine that it was not Sir Henry Irving who was on the stage, except in the movements of which demanded physical vigor of which the younger man is capable.

And apart from the well-merited reception of genuinely fine achievement, a clear note of sentiment ran through the tributes of the great audience, which welcomed the young actor when it was over.

Mr. Irving again proved that he possesses likewise the happy faculty of his father in respect to an audience's demands for a speech and his few words of thankfulness were marked by heartfelt gratitude and becoming modesty.

H. B. Irving wore the costumes of his father and used the same production which Sir Henry employed.

On Thursday night, Mr. Irving and Miss Blair will give their first performance in "The Lyons Mail," in which the young actor will again essay to interpret one of his father's successful characters.
