ROCKEFELLER GOLD.

Churches Should Make Him Suffer in Loneliness.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 27.—In his speech at Washburn Mr. Bryan paid his respects to John D. Rockefeller. He said that until recently the churches had been willing to accept money without asking questions about it, but one of the denominations had been stirred to its very depths by a controversy as to whether it should accept money from Mr. Rockefeller.

"I believe," he continued, "if the churches and charitable societies would stand up and say to Mr. Rockefeller, 'Keep your money; you stole it from the public; we will not accept it,' they would come near to making him feel how lone some a man can be in this world who has nothing but money, and no conscience back of it."

"Senator Beveridge has been quoted as saying in Washington not long ago: 'The greatest sin of this country is in this country is a moral degradation in both public and private life, and I believe that Senator Beveridge is right.' The investigations of his closest associates in both business and political life. All over the country there has been an attempt to modify politics. There has been a fight against graft and crookedness in office, and investigations have shown that in the great business communities there has been constant immorality under the guise of modern business methods, and we find that these men have not only been plundering the public at large, but swindling their closest associates in their own enterprises."

"There has been a revival of virtue, and I believe it means a great deal to this country, for it is the indication of men following the dictates of their consciences, and conscience, after all, is the most potent force that man knows on earth."

He went on, "that what we need in this country is a moral regeneration in both public and private life, and I believe that Senator Beveridge is right. The investigations of his closest associates in both business and political life. All over the country there has been an attempt to modify politics. There has been a fight against graft and crookedness in office, and investigations have shown that in the great business communities there has been constant immorality under the guise of modern business methods, and we find that these men have not only been plundering the public at large, but swindling their closest associates in their own enterprises."
