Question In "The Thing." Kingston, Oct. 26.--(To the Editor): To settle a question which you tell me, in your columns, whether it is correct to use the name of the person spoken to, frequently in conversation, such as: "No, I do not think so, Mr. Jones," or "Yes Mr. Smith, the question is one of great importance."

Sacrificed Much. Kingston, Oct. 27.--(To the Editor): I noticed in your issue of Wednesday an appreciative word in regard to the action of the Rev. John D. Boyd, in withdrawing his resignation. I think additional mention might be made for there are few men who would decline the tempting business propositions that were made to Mr. Boyd when it became known he was about to resign his charge of Zion church.

To my knowledge he has declined several offers made to him by leading business corporations and in each case entirely unsought by him. The salary in each case would net him from four to five times his present salary.

The people of Zion church and the presbytery have done themselves credit in dealing generously with one who has sacrificed so much for his love of hard work for the Master. DAVID G. LAIDLAW.
