their mother, combined forces to restore the family fortune. They argued that the medicine which was so good for their woman friends and neighbors was equally good for the women of the whole world.

The Pinkhams had no money, and little credit. Their first labor was in the kitchen, where roots and herbs were steeped on the stove, gradually filling a gross of bottles. Then came the question of selling it, for always before they had given it away freely. They hired a job printer to run off some pamphlets setting forth the merits of the medicine, now called Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and these were distributed by the Pinkham sons in Boston, New York, and Brooklyn.

The wonderful curative properties of the medicine were, to a great extent, self-advertising, for whoever used it recommended it to others, and the demand gradually increased.

In 1877, by combined efforts the family had saved enough money to commence newspaper advertising and from that time the growth and success of the enterprise were assured, until today Lydia E. Pinkham and her Vegetable Compound have become household words everywhere, and many tons of roots and herbs are used annually in its manufacture.

Lydia E. Pinkham herself did not live to see the great success of her work. She passed away in the year 1905, but her name lives on in the hearts of millions who credit her work as effectively as she could have done it herself.

During her long and eventful experience she was ever methodical in her work and she was always careful to preserve a record of every case that came to her attention. The case of every sick woman who applied to her for advice—and there were thousands—received the same careful study and the same careful treatment, and results were recorded for future reference, and to-day these records, together with hundreds of thousands made since, are available to sick women the world over, and represent a vast collaboration of information regarding the treatment of women's ills, which for authenticity and accuracy can hardly be equaled in any library in the world.

With Lydia E. Pinkham worked her daughter-in-law, the present Mrs. Pinkham. She was carefully instructed in all her hard-won knowledge, and for years she assisted her in her vast correspondence.

To her hands naturally fell the direction of the work when its originator passed away. For nearly twenty-five years she has continued it, and nothing in the work shows when the first Lydia E. Pinkham dropped her pen, and the present Mrs. Pinkham, now the mother of a large family, took it up. With woman assistants, some as capable as herself, the present Mrs. Pinkham continues this great work, and probably from the office of no other person have so many women been advised how to regain health. Sick women, this advice is "Yours for Health" freely given if you only write to ask for it.

Such is the history of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; made from simple roots and herbs; the one great medicine for women's ailments, and the fitting monument to the noble woman whose name it bears.

ARE WILLING TO SELL

SAYS THE GOVERNMENT CAN HAVE RAILROADS.

But as Private Citizen is Opposed to Public Ownership Suggestion and Believes Private Capital Better Equipped Than Governments to Direct Railroads—Points to Europe.

St. Louis, Oct. 29.—"If the government believes it can manage our railroads better than we can," said George J. Gould, after his arrival in St. Louis, "and it wishes to operate them, I have no objection to selling the properties. I would sell to the government as willingly as to an individual or company, were the lines to be disposed of, although ours are the best properties and are not on the market. This is how I feel, as a railroad man, in regard to the public ownership of carriers."

But, a private citizen, I am opposed to the public ownership suggestion. The government could not manage the properties successfully. Private capital or enterprise is better equipped than the government for directing railroads, and would realize successful results against failures on the part of the government. There seems to be an impression that the government would be superior to private enterprise, which impression is apparently founded on experience in Europe. Public ownership, or governmental ownership, as it is more properly called, in countries having a different political organization, is not the success in Europe that by some Americans it is believed to be. In fact, government ownership is a failure in Europe.

Italy, for example, would gladly surrender its proprietary interests and its public obligations, and it is even now taking steps to turn the state's lines over to private companies. Governmental ownership and management of the telegraph lines of Great Britain is an expensive experiment for the administration. The burden of the comparative failure of this form of governmental enterprise rests on the taxpayers of England.

"The chief reason that state ownership of railroads prevails in Europe is the necessity or desire to provide ample precautions against the possibility of war. Europe is virtually armed at all-times and it is for the purpose of being able to control the arteries of travel in the event of hostilities that governmental ownership of railroads is the general policy. From other standpoints governmental ownership of carriers is not a success."

DYING HE HELD BRIDE.

Terribly Wounded By His Effort to Call Help.

New York, Oct. 29.—Leroy McLean, a young electrician, was found in his home, No. 664 East One Hundred and Fifty-eighth street yesterday with the artery in his right wrist severed, and bleeding to death, and with the body of his bride in his arms. She had died of heart disease, and he in a frantic effort to summon help, had jammed his arm through the window glass, ripping the flesh to the bone.

McLean had been married less than a year. Neighbors say that he was always a sweetheart husband. He was with his pretty young wife constantly, except when business called.

To keep a business engagement, McLean came down-town, and he was met home until 11 o'clock. His wife met him on the stairs, and she was pale and trembling and cried out: "Leroy, I'm so glad you have come. I have been having fainting spells, one after another."

The young husband took his wife in to their apartments, when suddenly she fell unconscious. He tried to revive her, but failed, and then he became panic-stricken. He yelled for help but no one in the apartment-house heard him, and then he rushed to the window and tried to open it. It was locked, and in his terror he broke the glass with his arm. Then he began yelling.

Policeman Lonsberry of the Morrisania station, heard the cries for help and ran up to the McLean apartments. He forced open the door, and came upon the young husband, his arm jammed in the window, and his wife lying on the sofa lay the young wife, her face and hands covered with the blood of her husband, who was lying on the floor, and his wife lying on the sofa.

"You need treatment, too," said the policeman. "You'd better get a doctor. I'll get you to the hospital."

The policeman then tore the strap from his night stick and forced a tourniquet with it about the man's arm. Then he asked the man again to come to the doctor.

"Don't mind me," cried McLean. "You get a doctor for her," and he again began to both her face.

A physician came from Lebaton hospital. One glance at the wife showed him that she was dead. "She is beyond my aid," he told the husband. "She died of heart disease," the coroner's doctor said.

As a Result of Lovers' Quarrel

Laura Osten is Mortally Wounded and Louis Brown is Prisoner in New York Cell.

New York, Oct. 29.—Laura Osten, an East Orange, N.J., young woman, was shot and killed, mortally wounded while riding in a cab with Louis R. Brown in Broadway, last night. Her companion, who is twenty-one years of age and also a resident of East Orange, was arrested and locked up.

According to the police, Brown, following the shooting, attempted to kill himself, but was prevented by an officer who took a revolver from him. At the station house where he was charged with felonious assault, Brown refused to talk on the merits of the case, and was held in a cell.

Brown is employed as a clerk in a brokerage office in this city. Miss Osten has been stopping recently with friends in an uptown hotel here. Last night, according to the police, she met Brown by appointment and the two then quarrelled over the woman's repeated refusal to marry him.

Next, take familiar name-completers, for example, Romeo-Juliet, Jack-Jill—and make charades or rebuses out of them. For instance, represent Romeo-Juliet by a picture of Romeo, a letter O, a picture of a Jew, the letters L E T.

Give each charade a number corresponding to that on the cards of the persons you apply the names to—and set the guests to work guessing the names from the charades.

We brought a quart of those elephant crackers and emptied them on a dish and placed the dish on a table at one end of the room. Then while mamma held her watch one of us took a table knife and tried to see how many crackers we could manage to get out without any help from our other hand, and then to see if we could crack them with our teeth. Whoever first cracked a cracker was awarded a prize.

Dismissed A Claim.

Ottawa, Oct. 29.—In the exchequer court, this morning, Justice Brubridge dismissed a claim for damages made by the Metropolitan Police. A dredge struck a red in the St. Lawrence channel near Dickson's Landing, and the government was held responsible for the damage. The judge ruled that the channel was not a public one, and the section of the exchequer court sided with the government.

THE MARKET TOLLS.

Nigger in Fence Somewhere, Says a Writer.

Kingston, Oct. 29.—(To the Editor): I notice in Saturday Whig an article giving in detail the market collections for August, September and October. The article states that the total receipts for that period amounted to $235. The receipts for each week, when tallied, however, give only $225! How is this discrepancy accounted for? At this rate the collections for a year would amount to only $270, not over $1,000 as your informant states. The three months under review were the best three months in the year. These were the fall months, when, as everyone knows, the great bulk of produce is marketed. But what about the months of December, January, February, March, April and May, when there's little or no market? Was this condition not taken into consideration at all? The receipts will fall off at least one-third during the winter months. This would make the yearly collections, figuring on the basis of the last three months, only about $700.

From these receipts must be deducted the cost of collecting the tolls. It now requires the combined energies of a policeman, a collector, a clerk from the treasurer's office, and the scavenger—to make the collections. Is there men's time not worth anything? Are they giving their services free to the city? The old chestnut (used when a market clerk was paid to do the work), to the effect that the council had to pay the clerk's salary, and that therefore he might as well collect the tolls, will not do now.

If the city is paying the three present collectors for their time, then that time should be shared up against the receipts. If the city does not require the extra policeman on the force, the extra clerk in the treasurer's office and the scavenger, then would it not be better to let them go and thus save the city between $1,000 and $1,500 in salaries? They are too expensive men to be put at making one and five cents apiece, and too slow.

I pointed out above that the approximate receipts for the year—using the Whig's own figures and allowing for small winter markets—would be about $700. Deducting from this, say, $400 for expense of collecting by three civic officials, the market would be worth only about $300 to the city. I suspect this with what the city has received from a lease on the city's land and others during the past three, or four years. These gentlemen paid the city not less than $1,450, and even as much as $1,600, per year for the privilege of collecting tolls. It is visible these gentlemen worked for nothing? They must have made a few hundred out of it, or they wouldn't be so anxious to do it every year.

According to these figures, and believe they are reliable, the city will lose over $1,000 this year by the change in the method of collecting market tolls. What does the finance committee think of this? Is the matter not important enough to warrant them to do some figuring in the matter? There is something seriously wrong somewhere. Where is it? There's a "screw loose" somewhere.—A. T. PAYER.

READY FOR HALLOWEEN.

Special Crustables Will Be Sworn in For Occasion.

The city of Kingston will be well guarded on Wednesday night—Halloween. Besides the regular staff of police, twenty-five special men will be sworn in for the occasion, and small boys who are in the habit of "turning things loose," as it were, on this night, had better take warning. The police are determined to put a stop to all damage to property and all who violate the law will be taken to the cells, and be given an opportunity to explain matters before the magistrate. The chief is now on the look-out for good summer criminals, and is in a position to take on a few more.

The boy with the "two-shooter" and the tick has already made his appearance in Kingston, and this goes to show that Halloween has not by any means been forgotten.

Chicago The Beautiful.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—Chicago is to be made one of the most artistic cities in the United States. Comprehensive plans for the development of the city have been prepared, and will be put into effect. A connecting north and south boulevard, an outer parkway extending the entire length of the city along the lake front, and in time an outer park system, will be prepared under the direction of the Merchants' Club. Daniel H. Burnham, who recently prepared plans for the United States government for Washington, D.C., and for Manila, and also for the City of San Francisco, will have general supervision of the work. As consultants the most famous artists and architects of the world will be asked to come to Chicago.

His Ball Forfeited.

Brooklyn, Oct. 29.—A week ago Jacob Bronstein, a junk dealer, was arrested on a charge of stealing four hundred pounds of brass from the C.T.R. company. He was admitted to bail on his own recognizance in $400, together with the surety of his partner in business for $200 for his appearance. He has since left for parts unknown, and not being on hand when his name was called in court, the magistrate ordered the forfeiture of the bail. Vexler also gave a marked appearance for the amount of Bronstein's bond making $600 in all. A warrant has been issued for Bronstein's arrest.
