For cold weather wear, the blouses of flannel, albatross or such material will replace those of linen and thin cotton that are in vogue at present, the sketch showing one of the new models in a flannel waist. The design shows the front and rounded yoke section cut in one, the centre box plait which hides the closing being trimmed by groups of small pearl buttons. Buttons were also used on the plaits below the yoke on each side the front. The back of the waist was laid in three box plaits, The sleeve was finished by a cuff, the upper part of which was curved, as explained by the
