The Cape papers contain a sensational tiger story, which hails from the neighborhood of Nomaheya, where the brute had for some time been playing havoc among the lambs. Its end came with dramatic suddenness. A native family were eating their mid-day meal on the floor of their hut, when a savage beast dashed in and seized a small child. There was a tremendous stampede, but the mother succeeded in stampede, but the mother succeeded in rescuing the child and getting outside the hut, banging the door on the brute outside. A hue and cry was raised, and a young man, armed with a Snider rifle, clambered on the roof thatch, saw a tiger, which he succeed-ed in shooting. The animal measured eight feet nine inches from the tip of

A Scot Judge's Stories. Lord Salvesen, in an address at Ed-inburgh, recalled the old days when human life was held cheap. Sir Francis Bacon was "mightily importuned" by a malefactor to save his life. All ap-peals failed, and the culprit at length pleaded for mercy on account of kindred. "Your name," said he, Bacon, and my name is Hog, and in all ages Hog and Bacon are so nearly kindred that they are not to be separated." "Aye, but," replied the judge. "you and I cannot be kindred except you be changed, for Hog is not Ba-con until it be well hanged."
