JUMPING OFF PLACE.

Edmonton is the jumping-off place for all North-Western Canada, the place where town and wilderness strike hands. Here in Washington Square the prosperous little city on the Upper Saskatchewan seems even farther away than its accredited 2,500 miles. Enjoy it-What King Edward It is 800 miles west of Winnipeg, and at is some little way north of that fifty-third parallel, beyond which, if one is to believe Mr. Rex Beach, the laws of God and man don't work very well. If one were to attempt the some-what hazardous feat of walking due east from admonton, it would be found necessary to swim the upper waters of Hudson Bay before fetching up on the coast of Labrador. All this sounds very rather the interior recesses of Greenland than the pastoral charms of an Iowa or an Illinois; and if carried away from New York, buttoned inside a prosaic waistcoat, what T took to be the emotions of the explorer, my ignorance
