as happened last year at this time? Will she miss the dear Christmas. Lady again? It would be a pity.

Suddenly a bell sounds in the corridor and seems to draw near. The door is mysteriously opened. mysteriously opened. Veiled and silent, the celestial visitor enters, bearing, as a torch, the dear little tree.

Each one of us says his prayer. Oh, those little prayers, so short and simple! I am beginning to say them again. If I live to grow old, I shall end by not saying any others. The dear Lady listened to them. Then she spoke her

I have been told that the sounding-line has never been able to measure the depth of certain lakes. Perhaps because the line was not long enough. *But, truly, there is one abyss whose depth no sounding-line can measure. This abyss is the heart of a mother, and it is full of love.

Oh, how I wish that all the children might have happy Christmas days, and that in this world, as cold and cheerless as some December evenings, those we call the "grown-ups" might find a nook—light, warm, radiating love and hope—hidden down in their child-soul!—Charles Wagner, author of "The
